Carter criticized on Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's plan for shoring up the financially troubled Social Security system was criticized by House opponents today as a gimmick and "a brazen show of fiscal legerdemain."

Rep. Joe Waggoner, D+La., No. 2 Democrat on the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, said using income tax revenues to help finance the pension fund would "make Social Security a welfare matter and this looks dangerous to me."

Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, ranking Republican on the panel, told Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, that his presentation of the Carter plan to the subcommittee should have been labeled "President Carter's magic show."

The Treasury is in worse shape than the Social Security fund, Archer said. He asserted that pumping $14 billion in income taxes into Social Security over the next five years would require cutting other programs or increasing the federal deficit.

Archer accused Carter of "fiscal legerdemain" in the Social Security plan.

And Archer said the President's plan to use income taxes for Social Security in times of high unemployment was comparable to the "gimmick" of basing federal spending on the revenues that might be expected in times of low unemployment.

On Monday, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, said he saw no need to make the far-reaching changes Carter wants in order to solve short-term Social Security financing problems.

Russell B. Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, called Carter's proposals a step in the right direction. He added that while the Senate is likely to "vote to do much of what the President is recommending ... We may find ways to improve on his recommendations."

The proposals were spelled out by Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. Califano arranged to provide details today to a ways and means subcommittee.

Some lawmakers apparently see the Carter plan, including unprecedented use of income taxes to feed the pension fund, as the least painful way to save Social Security from bankruptcy.

3 arrested in grain swindle

CHARLESTON— Three Mississippi County men have been arrested and a New Madrid man is being sought on felony charges of stealing over $50 by deceit in connection with the swindling of over $28,000 from Cook Grain Company of Charleston, Sheriff Norris Grissom said today.

Arrested on the stealing charges were Michael Weems, 22, East Prairie Route Three, who was reportedly a grain grader and scale clerk at the company; Bobby Crump, age unavailable; and Junior Burney, 53, East Prairie. The arrests were made Saturday, Sunday and Monday afternoons by members of the sheriff's department.

A warrant has been issued for Bill Vaught of New Madrid County on the same charge.

Grissom said Cook Grain was swindled out of approximately $28,830 during a four-and-a-half month period allegedly by falsifying weight tickets and records and the selling of soybeans that did not exist. The arrests followed a four-month investigation, the sheriff said.

Crump was released Monday on $10,000 bond and Burney was released on $2,500 bond. Weems remained in custody this morning under $10,000 bond. Weems and Burney are to appear Thursday in Magistrate Court and Crump is to appear May 26.

Robbery called employe theft

A reported armed robbery Monday night at Delta Game Room on South Frisco Street turned out to be a case of employe theft, according to the Public Safety Department.

Officers said employe Ronnie W. DeRoush, 26, of Morehouse reported that the game room had been robbed by a man carrying a handgun.

Officers became suspicious of DeRoush's story and told owner George Rutledge that they did not believe him. Rutledge took DeRoush home and on the way told him that the he and the officers thought DeRoush was lying.

DeRoush allegedly admitted to Rutledge that he had given the money to another person. Rutledge then recovered the $73.50 missing from the game room officers said.

Detective Lt. Jack Patterson said this morning that he will seek to have a charge of filing a false police report brought against DeRoush.

Patrol plans open house

The highway patrol's new Troop E satellite station will hold open house from 2 to 5 p.m. May 15, Col. Al Lubker, superintendent of the patrol, has announced.

The 2,700-square-foot building on U.S. 60 a mile west of Interstate 55, houses modern offices for satellite commanding officer, Lt. W.E. Lemonds, intelligence and investigation unit, a zone office, a report room and radio dispatch.

The building includes a two-bay garage for patrol car maintenance and a 202-foot radio tower serves communications needs.

There are 27 uniformed members and six civilian employes assigned to the counties of Bollinger, Cape, Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid and Pemiscot, all of which are served by the station.

Shooting ruled justifiable

CARUTHERSVILLE— A coroner's jury Monday ruled that the shooting death of Warren Louis by auxiliary policeman Jesse Hopkins Sunday night was justifiable homicide.

Police Chief Jesse Johnson said Louis, a Caruthersville man, went to Hopkins' home and threatened him unless he took him to Hayti. Hopkins called the police from his home and asked them to come to a nearby bar where he was taking Louis.

Chief Johnson said that outside the bar, Louis, who was apparently intoxicated, pulled a gun on Hopkins. In the ensuing fight, Hopkins drew his own gun and shot Louis four times in the chest.

Louis was pronounced dead at Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti.

City promises to clean ditch along Pam, Crowe

It looks like residents along Pam Street and Crowe Place are finally going to get the drainage ditch behind their homes cleaned out.

City Manager Charles Church said today the city will begin circulating temporary right-of-way easement requests next month among property owners along Crowe place so a dragline can be moved along the ditch.

Among those complaining to the city about the ditch has been Mrs. Robert Robertson, 325 Pam St. She said she has been after the city to clean the ditch for three years.

She says snakes and large rats live in the ditch and wander through her back yard and her neighbors yards.

A large pile of tree limbs, tires and boards just south of her yard backs up the water in the ditch, turning it into a stagnant pool where mosquitoes breed during the summer, she said.

Church said the city's position has been that cleaning the ditch south of Ables Road to St. John's Drainage Ditch had priority over the ditch north of Ables Road, where Mrs. Robertson lives.

He said now that ditch south of Ables Road has been cleaned, the water level in the ditch north of Ables Road has dropped one to two feet. He said that has exposed some of the trash in the ditch.

"We have not forgotten the need there," he said.

Church said as long as the city can get signatures from all the property owners along the westside of the ditch the city can use the dragline.

If one person refuses to sign the agreements, the city's hands will be tied, he said.

Mrs. Robertson says he will not have any trouble getting the signatures.

Church said the city has an old drag line, but the operator has retired. He said the city will try to get the operator to work parttime or get someone else to work parttime or full time cleaning the ditch.

The problem with the ditch is mostly removal of debris, not lowering the bottom level, Church said.

While he could give no specific dollar figure for cleaning the ditch, he said he expects the work to take at least one month.

The ditch will be cleaned from Ables Road to Malone Avenue, Church said.

There is also a dead tree on the ditch easement behind the Robertson house. Church said he did not know when the tree would come out, but promised that eventually it would.

Jury rules in favor of area officers

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A U. S. District Court jury Friday night returned a verdict in favor of six Missouri Highway Patrol officers and the former sheriffs and deputies of New Madrid and Pemiscot counties in a civil rights suit that had been filed by two brothers, James E. and Bernie D. Flowers.

The Flowers brothers, who are currently serving terms at the Missouri penitentiary, had charged that following their arrest in July, 1975 they had been deprived of their rights, privileges and immunities under the U.S. Constitution and the laws of Missouri.

The jury of four women and two men deliberated nearly four hours before reaching a verdict in the day-and-a- half long trial that began about noon Thursday.

Defendants named in the suit were W. B. Darnell, M. E. Duckworth, L. E. Cox, J. M. Crismon, J. F. Moore and J. L. Davis, members of the highway patrol; former New Madrid County Sheriff W. L. "Cowboy" Ramsey Jr. and his former deputies, Fred Roe, Johnny Martin and Willis Wingo; and former Pemiscot County Sheriff Thad O. Shelly and his former deputies, Gene James, Charles Kelley, O. D. Bond and Gene Young.

The Flowers had charged that they had been physically assaulted by the highway patrol officers at the Portageville police station.

While in the custody of the New Madrid County Sheriff's department, the Flowers claimed they had been deprived of medical treatment, were subjected to threats against their life and physical abuse; were not given warning that any statement they made could be used against them in criminal proceedings; were deprived of timely assistance and advice of counsel; were not permitted to make phone calls and were not permitted to have clean clothes, showers or visitors.

They had ask for $50,000 compensatory damages and $200,000 punitive damages against the highway patrol officers and the New Madrid County officers in count one of their complaint.

The plaintiffs sought $35,000 compensatory damages and $100,000 punitive damages against the Pemiscot County officers in count two of the complaint.

Charges against the Pemiscot County officers included they were placed in solitary confinement without cause; were denied medical treatment; were subjected to physical abuse and threats against their lives; and were not permitted to have bedding, showers, clean clothes, proper food or to complete phone calls or have visitors.

The eldest brother, James E. Flowers is serving a 20-year sentence and Bernie D. Flowers is serving a four-year sentence on felonious assault charges.

The charges stem from a shoot-out between the men and state trooper Herbert A. Campbell on July 13, 1975 that occurred at the Mississippi River ferry landing at the

Oran accepts bid on new water well

ORAN — The City Council accepted a bid for construction of a new water well and pumping equipment in a special meeting Monday night.

After advertising for bids on April 22, 29 and May 6, the only bid received was from the Layne-Arkansas Company of Stuttgart, Ark. in the amount of $22,427.

Alex Waters of Waters and Associates of Sikeston, engineer for the city, opened the bid and explained the services to be provided. They include: Drilling of the well, figured at 125 feet deep, at a cost of $24 per foot of drilled hole and $18 per foot casing, expected to be 80-feet, and installation of pumping equipment.

The bid stated it would take 90-days to perform the work on the well, that will produce 200 gallons of water per minute. This time period will start after receipt of a signed contract.

Waters told the council the bid complied with bonding requirements, including a certificate of bonding by the Seaboard Security Company in the amount of five per cent of the $22,427 bid.

The engineer also told the council that the Layne-Arkansas Co. was the only company which had sought the plan requirements for the construction of the well and pumping equipment even after his firm had contacted other well drilling firms, seeking bids from them.

Waters recommended that the council accept the bid from Layne-Arkansas Co., also stating that upon receipt of a signed contract the bid said work would be started within 10-days of the date of receipt.

The council accepted the bid.

Production of the new well, Waters said, combined with the production of the recently repaired main well, will produce approximately 500-gallons of water per minute.

Federal funding in the amount of $330,000 for a new water treatment plant for the city was received in August of 1976.

The funding was scheduled for three phases, including: Water system improvements; new well and pumping equipment; erection of a new 100,000 gallons storage tank and construction of a new water treatment plant.

Waters said his firm would draw up the contract to be signed by the council and the Layne-Arkansas Co. on Tuesday so that construction could be started without delay.

With the city having recently suffered the loss of water for three days, because of the malfunction of the main well pump on April 24, the council stressed the importance of starting construction of the new well.

After the meeting to open the bid, the council met in special session with the police commission and police officer David Cathy to discuss work schedules for the month of May and ticketing proceedures. During the open discussion, Cathy submitted his oral resignation and left the room.

A motion was made to hire Jim Baker, a former police officer at East Prairie, who had an application on file if he was still available.

The council approved the motion to hire Baker as acting police chief for a 60-day period and then if he is found qualified the council will approve his appointment to chief of police at a salary of $600 per month.

The council approved advertising for applications for police officers in the southeast Missourian and the Daily Standard Newspapers.

CAN'T WE DO BETTER?

By MARVIN STONE

Total and ruthless overhaul of the country's welfare system is 15 years overdue, and nothing drives home the point more sharply than the case of Linda Taylor.

As the "Welfare Queen" of Chicago, Linda Taylor made a travesty of the system. Finally she has been convicted of drawing public assistance under two names at once, to the total of 23 monthly checks. According to the evidence and the prosecutors, she also got or applied for food stamps, free medical aid, rent subsidies, child care and housekeeper expenses — you name it — under a number of aliases.

Some of the more spectacular accusations against Taylor never reached trial. What is amazing, under the circumstances, is that she was ever brought to trial on any charges at all. It sends a chill down the spine to realize that nailing Linda took 2½ years. Her misdeeds did not seem to be anybody's business or within anybody's capacity to investigate. Only a public outcry finally brought her to justice.

Such an abdication of oversight saps the moral fiber of citizens. It encourages an attitude of: "Try it. If it works, O.K." A question often heard concerns what became of old-fashioned honesty. One answer is that the Government is running a school for cheaters.

Taylor was convicted of taking some $8,500. It doesn't seem like so much when you consider that there are tens of millions of welfare recipients and that more than 30 billion dollars a year is dished out. What is more, estimates of welfare fraud in her State alone run as high as 400 million dollars a year.

How many Lindas are there over the U.S.? Nobody knows — and nobody will know as long as welfare wallows in its present misery. It was not the welfare workers who turned Linda in. She might still be happily pocketing money under her aliases if she had not called in police to file a burglary report, and if the policemen had not spotted something that set them thinking further. Even after being alerted, officials at Chicago's public-aid department said they didn't have time to look into the case. State officials also begged off. The U. S. attorney's office said welfare fraud was not its domain, either, despite the federal agencies involved, and couldn't be bothered. No doubt they were telling the truth; the story is the same in city after city. Only a vast army could police welfare the way it is today.

Getting recognition for the need to do something about welfare is not the problem. Nor have practical efforts to set up a workable system been lacking. President Nixon put forward what looked like a bold and innovative plan to get welfare management under control. But it bogged down in Congress, and in the end he let it die. President Ford tried to tighten the food- stamp program, admittedly a hotbed of fraud and error. When Congress balked — fearing loss of benefits to people who really needed them — Ford then issued restrictions by executive order, only to see them blocked in court.

Now we have a new day: a President and Congress of the same party, and — furthermore — a President who advertises himself as a reorganizer and simplifier. This new President has promised a blueprint at the end of May to end this haphazard, overlapping welfare mess.

We are not prepared at this time to suggest that a negative income tax or a guaranteed annual income is the best or only method for structural reform, but such ideas should not be dismissed out of hand. Radical surgery is needed. As many present aid programs as possible must be consolidated to simplify administration. And any new approach should include a requirement that the able- bodied work or train for new jobs. And welfare should encourage, not discourage, healthy family life.

Finally, the White House and Congress must realize that merely trying to patch up the system is not enough. That way leads only to the further corporation of the country.

Now that they have been placed on the White House breakfast menu, everyone should know what grits are. But is there such a thing as one grit?

Dr. Frederick C. Mish, an editorial director of the G. & C. Merriam Company, was recently asked if grits, a popular diah among President Carter's southern countrymen, came in the singular.

"While in the ream of Platonic ideal forms there may exist such a thing as a single grit of hominy or other grain," he says, there is no singular word in that sense. Webster's New Collegiate Dicionary defines "grits" as "coarsely ground hulled grain," which is not be be confused with "grit," meaning sand or "unyielding courage in the face of hardship or danger.

One can hope, however, that the 39th president becomes as much identified with the singular form as he already has with the plural.

LITTLE AMERICA?

Is the United States about to begin a retreat from strong ambition and greatness? Is the nation moving toward the era of Little America?

These questions arise from the first signs of the Carter-Schlesinger energy policy.

Americans believe in growth and rightly so. The American story is one of growth, espansion, and vast resources. It is a story of a continent being settled by millions of immigrants from lands across the sea. This push toward growth provided the American people with their historic dynamism.

It would be a tragedy if the American people accepted the idea that they have reached the limits of growth. As the Wall Street Journal said recently, the country can't go back to Walden Pond without experiencing mass poverty.

America must continue to think big. It must continue to build and industrialize. Much of the American continent is still largely empty, though some sociologists speak of overcrowding. They obviously haven't seen Wyoming or Montana, New Mexico or Texas, or many of the lightly populated states in the mid-south and mid-west.

Growth means work for the American people. Americans have always had expectations of economic growth. They don't want a curtailment of growth that means a cutback in employment.

However, growth and employment require abundant energy. To be sure, the country is remiss in depending on imported foreign oil. The outflow of funds for oil from OPEC countries is an economic problem that must be reduced to a trickle.

The United States is fortunate, however, in that it possesses vast coal deposits. The U.S. also leads the world in nuclear science and engineering. Nuclear power can produce a significant part of the nation's energy needs—under conditions of safety—if the anti-nuclear supporters aren't allowed to shut down this modern miracle.

Other extremists regard the automobile as an enemy. They want to control of the manufacture of cars, and impose high taxes on gasoline in order to curtail automobile travel. in so doing, they are striking at the mobility of the American people, mobility that's vital to their ability to move goods, provide services, and earn their livings. The anti-automobile group insists that people use public transportation, but that's a pipe dream in most parts of the county.

The United States doesn't have to turn itself into Little America. It has the coal and the nuclear know-how to meet its energy needs. Deregulation of oil and gas would increase production of those fuels. In time, solar energy will make a contribution.

Conservation makes sense, but it isn't a substitute for an energy development policy. It must not be used as justification for junking the nation's tradition of growth and expansion. We have just begun to realized the potentialities of North America. This is no time to think small.

THEY CAN REFUSE TO TAKE IT

Congressmen and U.S. Senators, after their recent raise in pay, continue to clain they would have voted against it if they had been given an opportunity to do so. The President recommended the raises, and under a peculiar national law, they go into effect unless Congress votes against them. This they did not do, nor did the matter ever come up for a vote.

Their protests sound more like political window dressing than anything else.

If they're really sincere, they can refuse to accept that extra money, or if they do, can turn it back to the treasurey. So far no one has heard of anyone doing that, and probably won't.

The same thing will apply to state Legislators, if they give themselves a raise, as now seems liketly.

A young couple planned to complete the long drive from Atlanta to Savannah on the evening of their wedding. But when they eventually glanced at the dash instruments, between starry-eyed looks at the moon, they saw that they were almost out of gas. It was 2 a.m., and they were still an hour from Savannah. Since it was unlikely they'd find any gas station open, they got out of the car to flag down help.

A truck driver stopped. After hearing of their predicament, he said he had the ideal solution. He drove their car onto the back of his empty new-car carrier, invited the bride and groom to join him in the cab, and delivered them to the door of their hotel.

SUNSET LAWS MAY ACTUALLY STRENGTHEN REGULATORY AGENCIES

To the average citizen outside of government, it sounds easy. Just pass a law requiring that regulatory agencies be eliminated after five or six years unless they effectively justify their existence. This is called a sunset law, and it is the biggest fad since sunshine laws (which eliminate secrecy in government).

Colorado and Florida already have sunset laws, and the Senate Government Operations Committee intends to come up with one soon. Yet there is little reason to suppose that the arguments for deregulation will prevail in the future if they do not prevail now, and there is some reason to expect that sunset laws may even make it more difficult to eliminate unnecessary and uneconomic regulations.

The interests of the consuming public are widely dispersed, while the interests of those who benefit from some regulation can be concentrated and mobilized in support of that regulation. There is nothing in a periodic review of regulatory activities that changes this balance of political pressures in favor of deregulation. Professor David Henderson of the University of Rochester points out that a regulatory agency review "would to make sure it had constituency supporting it, so it would probably be more activist than otherwise." If the regulations helped special interests before the sunset law, by enforcing high cartel prices for example, that effect might be amplified by an agency attempting to generate support for its survival.

What happens to regulations each time an agency is up for renewal would also depend to some extent on the way consumers and legislators are thinking at the time, "For sunset laws to improve things," says Henderson, "people must be thinking better or more clearly five years from now than they are now."

While there is some interest in reducing regulations right now, that interest had been weaker in the past and may be weaker in the future. One regulatory agency that recently came up for renewal—the Federal Energy Administration—actually had its regulatory powers strenghtened in the process. There is no assurance that this might not be the typical outcome of a sunset law. The failure of regulation has often been used as an argument for still more regulation.

There have been hundreds of private studies and government commissions that have investigated government regulation is such industries transportation, communications, finance and energy. The evidence is overwhelming that the heavy hand of regulation is imposing tremendous costs on consumers with few offsetting benefits. Congress could and should act on this evidence now. A sunset law is simply a device to facilitate procrastination.

A man, who since he is married, considers himself an expert on women, says that it is completely fruitless to get into an argument with a woman.

"A woman is always able ot 'prove' her case by referring to some printed source," he said: "The voice of the printing press is incontestable as far as the female is concerned."

Our "woman expert" was simply explaining a truism long recognized by the great retailers of America: women take the printed word very seriously they believe it and act on it.

This is why newspapers remain the dominant advertising medium. It is why major retail stores spend the bulk of their advertising budget on newspaper advertising.

For, whether men like it or not, advertisers are not greatly concerned about the reactions of the male. It so happens that women spend about 80 per cent of the retail dollar and direct the expenditure of a goodly portion of the remaining 20 per cent.

It also seems to be the nature of a woman to survey carefully the advertising in the family newspaper, making mental notes of even the most obscure offerings of local merchants.

The housewife may not remember what the mayor said about a proposed tax increase, but in all probability she will remember in detail what the Shod Shoppe is offering in shoes through newspaper advertising.

And very likely she will keep the newspaper near at hand to refresh her memory before she makes her trip to towon. Surprising? No, for this is an important part of the economy of homemaking.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington's Odd Couple

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- A Washington odd couple, Spiro Agnew and Tongsun Park, have quietly teamed up in London.

Agnew was drummed out of the vice presidency in 1973, and Park fled from a Justice Department investigation two years later -- the former for allegedly accepting bribes, the latter for allegedly paying bribes.

They have now combined their talents in pursuit of international business deals. Park's private papers contain cryptic reference to joint Agnew-Park ventures in the Middle East.

We have also established that Agnew has received messages at the Korean entrepreneur's London office. On at least one occasion, Park personally accepted a telephone message for the former vice president.

More specifically, an elusive businessman named Sami Shamoon has sent joint cables to Agnew and Park about a steel venture in Iran.

One cable, dated Nov. 25, 1975, assured the odd couple that the Iranian steel business "will grow very big since 100,000 residential flats coming up only in Teheran. With dams and other projects, steel construction is extremely and definitely vast. If you agree, we can have a joint venture together."

In a separate cable, an aide advised Tongsun Park of a Shamoon cable "addressed to both you and Governor S.A. as a most urgent and important message. It is clear from other evidence that the mysterious "Governor S.A." is Spiro Agnew, who was once governor of Maryland.

Park's private records also tell of bulk yarn deals in Iran. A travel itinerary indicates that Agnew, Park and Shamoon made at least one business trip together to New York City. And Agnew's name crops up in other Park documents.

Our attempts to get an explanation of the Agnew-Park connection from the principals were fruitless. We were told that both men were out of the country. We tried to reach Agnew through Pathlite, Inc., a Maryland firm that lists him as its president. All our questions were answered with a polite "no comment."

Park's American company, Pacific Development, Inc., had no telephone. We tried Park at a London number provided by one of our sources. The phone was answered "Eastern Navigation," but we were told Park was not there. We left messages for him in London and for his attorney in Washington.

We also traced the mysterious Sami Shamoon to London, but he has an unlisted number.

Footnote: In past columns, we have chronicled Park's financial shenanigans, which have often left his creditors holding the bills for his financial fandangos and posh lifestyle. We pieced the story together from his private papers, which were saved from the shredder. Reporters Lew Perdue and Ken Cummins are now collecting these papers for a book on Washington scandals, which they will write with author Robin Moore.

Ford Attack: Gerald Ford has been keeping his powder dry, but he is now preparing a broadside against the man who succeeded him in the White House.

In his first major political speech since leaving office, the former president will tell the nation on May 19 what he thinks of Jimmy Carter's policies.

Ford's opinion of his successor, according to intimates, isn't favorable. He intends to take the hide off Carter on such domestic issues as inflation, taxes and energy. As one intimate put it: "Ford's going to take off the gloves."

The former president gave the first hint of what is to come in some off-the-cuff remarks on April 16. "Mr. Carter's anti-inflation program came in like a lion. It's going out like a mouse," grumped Ford.

Ford probably will point out in his May 19 speech that he held the annual inflation rate to slightly over five per cent. But under Carter, there is gloomy talk of another round of "double digit" inflation.

Ford is hard at work on the May 19 speech. He is also consulting advisers on Capitol Hill to make sure his remarks won't upset their political strategies.

Footnote: He will take it easy on Carter on foreign affairs, particularly the delicate SALT negotiations, Ford's friends tell us.

Oil Rip-Off: The United States spends a staggering $35 billion on imported oil each year, yet there are no controls over the oil purchases. It is left to the oil companies, not the federal government, to negotiate the purchases.

This might be accepted as the American way, given our free enterprise system, except for some multimillion-dollar price manipulations. The Federal Energy Administration recently discovered that 20 major U.S. oil companies overcharged the public $336 million for oil transferred from their foreign affiliates. Gulf Oil alone ripped off the country for $79.6 million.

This has outraged Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, chairman of the powerful House Trade subcommittee. In a private letter to President Carter, Vanik has written: "In reviewing your energy proposal, which I substantially support, I find no recommendation for changing the present method of import oil procurement.

"Since the oil we import is sold by foreign governments as sovereign states, it would appear to our national advantage to deal with the oil-producing states on a government-by-government basis."

Leaving the negotiations to the oil industry, Vanik concludes, hasn't always served "the best interests of the American consumer."

THE NIXON SHOW, PART I

WASHINGTON— It's very hard to get the family together these days. We only seem to gather for graduations, weddings and when Nixon goes on television.

Last week it was our turn to have everyone over to the house because Cousin Edith had us over to her house when Nixon resigned. We all gathered around the TV set–Cousin Edith, Uncle Harold, Aunt Alice and Granny.

Granny is the only one in the family who is still 1,000 percent for Nixon. She thinks the press drove him from office and she doesn't mind saying it to me. "You and Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman are responsible for that poor man being driven into exile."

I keep explaining to her that it wasn't just Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman who did it. If Jason Robards hadn't backed them up they would have never been able to do it.

Anyway, after dinner my wife gave each person a box of Kleenex and we waited for the show to begin.

As it opened up, Grannny said incredulously, "Oh, my goodness. He's developed an English accent."

"That isn't Richard Nixon," I explained to her. "That's David Frost."

"What's an Englishman doing interviewing Richard Nixon on American televison?" she wanted to know.

"Frost offered Nixon $600,000 plus 10 percent of the profits to appear on TV."

"Nixon would never take money for appearing on television." Granny said. "That would be checkbook journalism."

"Well, he did."

"Hush," said Cousin Edith, "or we'll never know the truth about Watergate."

Frost started to ask about the tapes and what was said on them.

Nixon replied that everyone could put their own interpretation on them, but he could categorically say he did nothing to obstruct justice.

"I believe him," Uncle Harold said. "I never did before, but a man wouldn't go on television for $600,000 and lie."

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because if the FCC found out about it, they could take the station's license away."

Frost kept zeroing in on what Nixon said to Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson about the hush money.

Granny started to get mad. "What right does an Englishman have to ask him questions about American hush money?"

"He's only doing his job, Granny," I said. "There does seem to be a discrepancy between what Nixon said and what he really meant."

When Nixon was asked what was on the 18½ minutes of tape that had been erased, he said that it was merely a discussion between himself and Haldeman on a public relations offensive to counteract the political slopover of Watergate.

"I believe him," Cousin Harold said. "What else could they have possibly talked about?"

As the show went on, Nixon switched from details to what was in his heart. He said if he had any fault it was that he wasn't a good butcher.

"I didn't even know Nixon was a butcher," Granny said.

"That's just a figure of speech," I told her. "He was quoting a prime minister of Breat Britain who said a leader has to be a good butcher."

Nixon admitted he lied to the American people, but they were little lies and he did it to protect Ehrlichman and Haldeman because he didn't want to do to them what Eisenhower did to Sherman Adams.

"I believe him," Uncle Harold said. "The man was only trying to protect his loved ones."

At the end of the show Nixon said he would never grovel before the American people, and if he had made mistakes they were of the heart and not the head. It was at this moment that everyone grabbed for their Kleenex boxes.

Granny was the most moved, of course. Finally, she pulled herself together and said, "Well, I hope Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman are satisfied. They not only destroyed the best President we ever had but they made him go on televison to bare his soul to an Englishman."

All Uncle Harold could say between sobs was "I believe it. I believe it. I believe it."

These questions arise from the first signs of the Carter-Schlesinger energy policy.

Americans believe in growth and rightly so. The American story is one of growth, espansion, and vast resources. It is a story of a continent being settled by millions of immigrants from lands across the sea. This push toward growth provided the American people with their historic dynamism.

It would be a tragedy if the American people accepted the idea that they have reached the limits of growth. As the Wall Street Journal said recently, the country can't go back to Walden Pond without experiencing mass poverty.

America must continue to think big. It must continue to build and industrialize. Much of the American continent is still largely empty, though some sociologists speak of overcrowding. They obviously haven't seen Wyoming or Montana, New Mexico or Texas, or many of the lightly populated states in the mid-south and mid-west.

Growth means work for the American people. Americans have always had expectations of economic growth. They don't want a curtailment of growth that means a cutback in employment.

However, growth and employment require abundant energy. To be sure, the country is remiss in depending on imported foreign oil. The outflow of funds for oil from OPEC countries is an economic problem that must be reduced to a trickle.

The United States is fortunate, however, in that it possesses vast coal deposits. The U.S. also leads the world in nuclear science and engineering. Nuclear power can produce a significant part of the nation's energy needs—under conditions of safety—if the anti-nuclear supporters aren't allowed to shut down this modern miracle.

Other extremists regard the automobile as an enemy. They want to control of the manufacture of cars, and impose high taxes on gasoline in order to curtail automobile travel. in so doing, they are striking at the mobility of the American people, mobility that's vital to their ability to move goods, provide services, and earn their livings. The anti-automobile group insists that people use public transportation, but that's a pipe dream in most parts of the county.

The United States doesn't have to turn itself into Little America. It has the coal and the nuclear know-how to meet its energy needs. Deregulation of oil and gas would increase production of those fuels. In time, solar energy will make a contribution.

Conservation makes sense, but it isn't a substitute for an energy development policy. It must not be used as justification for junking the nation's tradition of growth and expansion. We have just begun to realized the potentialities of North America. This is no time to think small.

THEY CAN REFUSE TO TAKE IT

Congressmen and U.S. Senators, after their recent raise in pay, continue to clain they would have voted against it if they had been given an opportunity to do so. The President recommended the raises, and under a peculiar national law, they go into effect unless Congress votes against them. This they did not do, nor did the matter ever come up for a vote.

Their protests sound more like political window dressing than anything else.

If they're really sincere, they can refuse to accept that extra money, or if they do, can turn it back to the treasurey. So far no one has heard of anyone doing that, and probably won't.

The same thing will apply to state Legislators, if they give themselves a raise, as now seems liketly.

A young couple planned to complete the long drive from Atlanta to Savannah on the evening of their wedding. But when they eventually glanced at the dash instruments, between starry-eyed looks at the moon, they saw that they were almost out of gas. It was 2 a.m., and they were still an hour from Savannah. Since it was unlikely they'd find any gas station open, they got out of the car to flag down help.

A truck driver stopped. After hearing of their predicament, he said he had the ideal solution. He drove their car onto the back of his empty new-car carrier, invited the bride and groom to join him in the cab, and delivered them to the door of their hotel.

SUNSET LAWS MAY ACTUALLY STRENGTHEN REGULATORY AGENCIES

To the average citizen outside of government, it sounds easy. Just pass a law requiring that regulatory agencies be eliminated after five or six years unless they effectively justify their existence. This is called a sunset law, and it is the biggest fad since sunshine laws (which eliminate secrecy in government).

Colorado and Florida already have sunset laws, and the Senate Government Operations Committee intends to come up with one soon. Yet there is little reason to suppose that the arguments for deregulation will prevail in the future if they do not prevail now, and there is some reason to expect that sunset laws may even make it more difficult to eliminate unnecessary and uneconomic regulations.

The interests of the consuming public are widely dispersed, while the interests of those who benefit from some regulation can be concentrated and mobilized in support of that regulation. There is nothing in a periodic review of regulatory activities that changes this balance of political pressures in favor of deregulation. Professor David Henderson of the University of Rochester points out that a regulatory agency review "would to make sure it had constituency supporting it, so it would probably be more activist than otherwise." If the regulations helped special interests before the sunset law, by enforcing high cartel prices for example, that effect might be amplified by an agency attempting to generate support for its survival.

What happens to regulations each time an agency is up for renewal would also depend to some extent on the way consumers and legislators are thinking at the time, "For sunset laws to improve things," says Henderson, "people must be thinking better or more clearly five years from now than they are now."

While there is some interest in reducing regulations right now, that interest had been weaker in the past and may be weaker in the future. One regulatory agency that recently came up for renewal—the Federal Energy Administration—actually had its regulatory powers strenghtened in the process. There is no assurance that this might not be the typical outcome of a sunset law. The failure of regulation has often been used as an argument for still more regulation.

There have been hundreds of private studies and government commissions that have investigated government regulation is such industries transportation, communications, finance and energy. The evidence is overwhelming that the heavy hand of regulation is imposing tremendous costs on consumers with few offsetting benefits. Congress could and should act on this evidence now. A sunset law is simply a device to facilitate procrastination.

A man, who since he is married, considers himself an expert on women, says that it is completely fruitless to get into an argument with a woman.

"A woman is always able ot 'prove' her case by referring to some printed source," he said: "The voice of the printing press is incontestable as far as the female is concerned."

Our "woman expert" was simply explaining a truism long recognized by the great retailers of America: women take the printed word very seriously they believe it and act on it.

This is why newspapers remain the dominant advertising medium. It is why major retail stores spend the bulk of their advertising budget on newspaper advertising.

For, whether men like it or not, advertisers are not greatly concerned about the reactions of the male. It so happens that women spend about 80 per cent of the retail dollar and direct the expenditure of a goodly portion of the remaining 20 per cent.

It also seems to be the nature of a woman to survey carefully the advertising in the family newspaper, making mental notes of even the most obscure offerings of local merchants.

The housewife may not remember what the mayor said about a proposed tax increase, but in all probability she will remember in detail what the Shod Shoppe is offering in shoes through newspaper advertising.

And very likely she will keep the newspaper near at hand to refresh her memory before she makes her trip to towon. Surprising? No, for this is an important part of the economy of homemaking.

THE TROUBLE ...

THE NIXON SHOW, PART I

WASHINGTON— It's very hard to get the family together these days. We only seem to gather for graduations, weddings and when Nixon goes on television.

Last week it was our turn to have everyone over to the house because Cousin Edith had us over to her house when Nixon resigned. We all gathered around the TV set--Cousin Edith, Uncle Harold, Aunt Alice and Granny.

Granny is the only one in the family who is still 1,000 percent for Nixon. She thinks the press drove him from office and she doesn't mind saying it to me. "You and Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman are responsible for that poor man being driven into exile."

I keep explaining to her that it wasn't just Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman who did it. If Jason Robards hadn't backed them up they would have never been able to do it.

Anyway, after dinner my wife gave each person a box of Kleenex and we waited for the show to begin.

As it opened up, Grannny said incredulously, "Oh, my goodness. He's developed an English accent."

"That isn't Richard Nixon," I explained to her. "That's David Frost."

"What's an Englishman doing interviewing Richard Nixon on American televison?" she wanted to know.

"Frost offered Nixon $600,000 plus 10 percent of the profits to appear on TV."

"Nixon would never take money for appearing on television." Granny said. "That would be checkbook journalism."

"Well, he did."

"Hush," said Cousin Edith, "or we'll never know the truth about Watergate."

Frost started to ask about the tapes and what was said on them.

Nixon replied that everyone could put their own interpretation on them, but he could categorically say he did nothing to obstruct justice.

"I believe him," Uncle Harold said. "I never did before, but a man wouldn't go on television for $600,000 and lie."

"Why not?" I asked.

"Because if the FCC found out about it, they could take the station's license away."

Frost kept zeroing in on what Nixon said to Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson about the hush money.

Granny started to get mad. "What right does an Englishman have to ask him questions about American hush money?"

"He's only doing his job, Granny," I said. "There does seem to be a discrepancy between what Nixon said and what he really meant."

When Nixon was asked what was on the 18½ minutes of tape that had been erased, he said that it was merely a discussion between himself and Haldeman on a public relations offensive to counteract the political slopover of Watergate.

"I believe him," Cousin Harold said. "What else could they have possibly talked about?"

As the show went on, Nixon switched from details to what was in his heart. He said if he had any fault it was that he wasn't a good butcher.

"I didn't even know Nixon was a butcher," Granny said.

"That's just a figure of speech," I told her. "He was quoting a prime minister of Breat Britain who said a leader has to be a good butcher."

Nixon admitted he lied to the American people, but they were little lies and he did it to protect Ehrlichman and Haldeman because he didn't want to do to them what Eisenhower did to Sherman Adams.

"I believe him," Uncle Harold said. "The man was only trying to protect his loved ones."

At the end of the show Nixon said he would never grovel before the American people, and if he had made mistakes they were of the heart and not the head. It was at this moment that everyone grabbed for their Kleenex boxes.

Granny was the most moved, of course. Finally, she pulled herself together and said, "Well, I hope Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman are satisfied. They not only destroyed the best President we ever had but they made him go on televison to bare his soul to an Englishman."

All Uncle Harold could say between sobs was "I believe it. I believe it. I believe it."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington's Odd Couple

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- A Washington odd couple, Spiro Agnew and Tongsun Park, have quietly teamed up in London.

Agnew was drummed out of the vice presidency in 1973, and Park fled from a Justice Department investigation two years later -- the former for allegedly accepting bribes, the latter for allegedly paying bribes.

They have now combined their talents in pursuit of international business deals. Park's private papers contain cryptic reference to joint Agnew-Park ventures in the Middle East.

We have also established that Agnew has received messages at the Korean entrepreneur's London office. On at least one occasion, Park personally accepted a telephone message for the former vice president.

More specifically, an elusive businessman named Sami Shamoon has sent joint cables to Agnew and Park about a steel venture in Iran.

One cable, dated Nov. 25, 1975, assured the odd couple that the Iranian steel business "will grow very big since 100,000 residential flats coming up only in Teheran. With dams and other projects, steel construction is extremely and definitely vast. If you agree, we can have a joint venture together."

In a separate cable, an aide advised Tongsun Park of a Shamoon cable "addressed to both you and Governor S.A. as a most urgent and important message. It is clear from other evidence that the mysterious "Governor S.A." is Spiro Agnew, who was once governor of Maryland.

Park's private records also tell of bulk yarn deals in Iran. A travel itinerary indicates that Agnew, Park and Shamoon made at least one business trip together to New York City. And Agnew's name crops up in other Park documents.

Our attempts to get an explanation of the Agnew-Park connection from the principals were fruitless. We were told that both men were out of the country. We tried to reach Agnew through Pathlite, Inc., a Maryland firm that lists him as its president. All our questions were answered with a polite "no comment."

Park's American company, Pacific Development, Inc., had no telephone. We tried Park at a London number provided by one of our sources. The phone was answered "Eastern Navigation," but we were told Park was not there. We left messages for him in London and for his attorney in Washington.

We also traced the mysterious Sami Shamoon to London, but he has an unlisted number.

Footnote: In past columns, we have chronicled Park's financial shenanigans, which have often left his creditors holding the bills for his financial fandangos and posh lifestyle. We pieced the story together from his private papers, which were saved from the shredder. Reporters Lew Perdue and Ken Cummins are now collecting these papers for a book on Washington scandals, which they will write with author Robin Moore.

Ford Attack: Gerald Ford has been keeping his powder dry, but he is now preparing a broadside against the man who succeeded him in the White House.

In his first major political speech since leaving office, the former president will tell the nation on May 19 what he thinks of Jimmy Carter's policies.

Ford's opinion of his successor, according to intimates, isn't favorable. He intends to take the hide off Carter on such domestic issues as inflation, taxes and energy. As one intimate put it: "Ford's going to take off the gloves."

The former president gave the first hint of what is to come in some off-the-cuff remarks on April 16. "Mr. Carter's anti-inflation program came in like a lion. It's going out like a mouse," grumped Ford.

Ford probably will point out in his May 19 speech that he held the annual inflation rate to slightly over five per cent. But under Carter, there is gloomy talk of another round of "double digit" inflation.

Ford is hard at work on the May 19 speech. He is also consulting advisers on Capitol Hill to make sure his remarks won't upset their political strategies.

Footnote: He will take it easy on Carter on foreign affairs, particularly the delicate SALT negotiations, Ford's friends tell us.

Oil Rip-Off: The United States spends a staggering $35 billion on imported oil each year, yet there are no controls over the oil purchases. It is left to the oil companies, not the federal government, to negotiate the purchases.

This might be accepted as the American way, given our free enterprise system, except for some multimillion-dollar price manipulations. The Federal Energy Administration recently discovered that 20 major U.S. oil companies overcharged the public $336 million for oil transferred from their foreign affiliates. Gulf Oil alone ripped off the country for $79.6 million.

This has outraged Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, chairman of the powerful House Trade subcommittee. In a private letter to President Carter, Vanik has written: "In reviewing your energy proposal, which I substantially support, I find no recommendation for changing the present method of import oil procurement.

"Since the oil we import is sold by foreign governments as sovereign states, it would appear to our national advantage to deal with the oil-producing states on a government-by-government basis."

Leaving the negotiations to the oil industry, Vanik concludes, hasn't always served "the best interests of the American consumer."

Today's news in brief

Ford wins Truman award

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford was to begin a lecture series at the University of California today, after receiving an award Monday established in honor of a man he has long admired — former President Harry S. Truman.

Ford, a virtual recluse in his Kansas City hotel room, labored over the lectures and the speech he made in acceptance of the 5th annual Harry S. Truman Good Neighbor Award. In that speech he said it was time for the nation to establish its priorities and stand by that decision in a show of unity.

Ford spoke highly of Truman's foreign affairs policy and the support it received, and said the nation again needs "the bipartisan policy which has served us so well in past years."

"Strong presidential leadership is not enough," Ford said. "We need to seek out one strong ground in which the President, the Congress and the American people can proudly and totally stand in crisis and calm.

"We must decide again as a nation what is important to all of us, what goals we will set; what dangers we are willing to risk and what burdens we will undertake."

Junior Miss from Arkansas

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A blonde, blue-eyed ballet dancer from Jonesboro, Ark., Christy Moller, is the new America's Junior Miss, but she credits some of her luck in winning the crown to her Alabama connections.

Miss Moller, who did a ballet called "Doll on a Music Box," moved to Arkansas from the small north Alabama town of Gurley three years ago.

Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Mills, still live in the Madison County town near Huntsville.

"I just can't believe it," she told newsmen after being crowned by last year's Junior Miss, Lenne Jo Hallgren of Washington State. "My head just hurts. I can't even think. I'd like to get a little sleep."

College scholarships worth more than $75,000 were divided among the winners of various Junior Miss events.

Miss Moller is the third Junior Miss from Arkansas to win the national title in the pageant's 20-year history. She wants to go into television broadcasting as a career.

She has studied ballet for four years.

Two held in widow's slaying

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Police held two men today in the slaying of a wealthy Indianapolis widow and said $1 million in cash and some jewelry apparently stolen from her home were recovered.

The Marion County Sheriff's Department said Manuel Lee Robison, 29, Indianapolis, was arrested Monday night on a charge of first-degree murder and John Williams, 38, Indianapolis, on a charge of accessory after the fact.

Sheriff Donald Gilman said he received a call on Monday from the attorney for an Indianapolis automobile agency who said Williams was buying a second car within a week. Gilman said he learned that Williams had paid cash for the first car, using $100 bills.

The sheriff said deputies followed Williams, using patrol cars and helicopters, and that this led to the arrests.

Marjorie V. Jackson, 66, widow of a grocery chain founder, was found shot to death Saturday in her fire-charred home. Police said the fire apparently was set by the killers.

They said more than $5 million in cash was found in the home — stuffed in a garbage can, toolboxes, closets and a vacuum cleaner bag. Another $3 million was missing, they said.

State tax amendment urged

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri needs to amend its tax laws so that taxpayers can claim their standard deduction on state returns even if Congress eliminates the provision on federal returns, the Missouri Senate majority leader said Monday.

Sen. John Schneider, D+St. Louis County, said Missourians could pay an additional $130 million in state income taxes if state lawmakers do not act.

Missouri bases its standard deduction on the federal standard deduction. Schneider said the problem is developing because Congress is planning to figure the standard deduction into federal tax tables so individuals do not have to figure it separately. Under current Missouri law, that would mean taxpayers would have to do without the standard deduction on their state income tax forms.

The deduction is currently set at a maximum of $2,800 for taxes paid this year by a couple filing jointly.

Hearst's probation 'stuns'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patricia Hearst has won five years probation on charges stemming from a 1974 shootout at Mel's Sporting Goods Store. Some said Miss Hearst — who could have received 15½ years to life in prison — suffered enough, but the store owner says he was stunned by the sentence.

"I don't quite understand it. I don't think it's right, but what can you do?" said Carroll (Bill) Huett, 55. "It's very obvious (that she should have been jailed). If it had been one of us we would have. I was a little stunned to say the least," he said in an interview Monday after the sentence was announced.

In addition to probation, Superior Court Judge E. Talbot Callister ordered the heiresss to make financial restitution to Huett.

A report filed by Miss Hearst's probation investigator revealed that Huett is "extremely bitter and angry as to how this offense has affected his life and business."

Huett, who was struck in the arm by one of Miss Hearst's bullets, has filed a civil suit against Miss Hearst, the report said, but was unable to get past her bodyguards to serve a subpoena.

He has estimated damage to his store at $6,000.

Disaster centers to open

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Missourians affected by tornadoes and severe thunderstorms last week will be able to apply for temporary housing, seek lowrate loans and request further help today at federal disaster assistance centers in Sedalia and Pleasant Hill.

Three persons were killed by tornadoes that swept through four counties May 4, more than 150 others were injured and millions of dollars worth of property was damaged.

The disaster assistance centers will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily at the Community Center in Sedalia and at Memorial Hall in Pleasant Hill, according to Francis X. Tobin, regional director of the Federal Disaster Administration in Kansas City.

Mobile units will also provide assistance in four other communities: Higginsville, City Hall, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Wednesday; Missouri City, City Hall, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Thursday; Excelsior Springs, City Hall, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Friday, and Kansas City, Ruskin High School, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday.

All students back in school

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Schools were open today for all of the Kansas City school district's 51,000 students for the first time since the Federation of Teachers went out on strike seven weeks ago.

Meanwhile, the battle continues in the Missouri Court of Appeals with the district seeking to overturn a Jackson County Circuit ruling which ordered that the district take no reprisals against the strikers.

Judge Lewis W. Clymer issued his order Friday. The order also directed the teachers to go back to work and they voted to do so Sunday. The district decided to delay the opening of all schools until today.

During the strike, the district had gradually reopened most of its schools with nonstriking teachers.

Today's news in brief

Ford wins Truman award

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford was to begin a lecture series at the University of California today, after receiving an award Monday established in honor of a man he has long admired — former President Harry S. Truman.

Ford, a virtual recluse in his Kansas City hotel room, labored over the lectures and the speech he made in acceptance of the 5th annual Harry S. Truman Good Neighbor Award. In that speech he said it was time for the nation to establish its priorities and stand by that decision in a show of unity.

Ford spoke highly of Truman's foreign affairs policy and the support it received, and said the nation again needs "the bipartisan policy which has served us so well in past years."

"Strong presidential leadership is not enough," Ford said. "We need to seek out one strong ground in which the President, the Congress and the American people can proudly and totally stand in crisis and calm.

"We must decide again as a nation what is important to all of us, what goals we will set; what dangers we are willing to risk and what burdens we will undertake."

Junior Miss from Arkansas

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A blonde, blue-eyed ballet dancer from Jonesboro, Ark., Christy Moller, is the new America's Junior Miss, but she credits some of her luck in winning the crown to her Alabama connections.

Miss Moller, who did a ballet called "Doll on a Music Box," moved to Arkansas from the small north Alabama town of Gurley three years ago.

Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Mills, still live in the Madison County town near Huntsville.

"I just can't believe it," she told newsmen after being crowned by last year's Junior Miss, Lenne Jo Hallgren of Washington State. "My head just hurts. I can't even think. I'd like to get a little sleep."

College scholarships worth more than $75,000 were divided among the winners of various Junior Miss events.

Miss Moller is the third Junior Miss from Arkansas to win the national title in the pageant's 20-year history. She wants to go into television broadcasting as a career.

She has studied ballet for four years.

Two held in widow's slaying

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Police held two men today in the slaying of a wealthy Indianapolis widow and said $1 million in cash and some jewelry apparently stolen from her home were recovered.

The Marion County Sheriff's Department said Manuel Lee Robison, 29, Indianapolis, was arrested Monday night on a charge of first-degree murder and John Williams, 38, Indianapolis, on a charge of accessory after the fact.

Sheriff Donald Gilman said he received a call on Monday from the attorney for an Indianapolis automobile agency who said Williams was buying a second car within a week. Gilman said he learned that Williams had paid cash for the first car, using $100 bills.

The sheriff said deputies followed Williams, using patrol cars and helicopters, and that this led to the arrests.

Marjorie V. Jackson, 66, widow of a grocery chain founder, was found shot to death Saturday in her fire-charred home. Police said the fire apparently was set by the killers.

They said more than $5 million in cash was found in the home — stuffed in a garbage can, toolboxes, closets and a vacuum cleaner bag. Another $3 million was missing, they said.

State tax amendment urged

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri needs to amend its tax laws so that taxpayers can claim their standard deduction on state returns even if Congress eliminates the provision on federal returns, the Missouri Senate majority leader said Monday.

Sen. John Schneider, D+St. Louis County, said Missourians could pay an additional $130 million in state income taxes if state lawmakers do not act.

Missouri bases its standard deduction on the federal standard deduction. Schneider said the problem is developing because Congress is planning to figure the standard deduction into federal tax tables so individuals do not have to figure it separately. Under current Missouri law, that would mean taxpayers would have to do without the standard deduction on their state income tax forms.

The deduction is currently set at a maximum of $2,800 for taxes paid this year by a couple filing jointly.

Hearst's probation 'stuns'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patricia Hearst has won five years probation on charges stemming from a 1974 shootout at Mel's Sporting Goods Store. Some said Miss Hearst — who could have received 15½ years to life in prison — suffered enough, but the store owner says he was stunned by the sentence.

"I don't quite understand it. I don't think it's right, but what can you do?" said Carroll (Bill) Huett, 55. "It's very obvious (that she should have been jailed). If it had been one of us we would have. I was a little stunned to say the least," he said in an interview Monday after the sentence was announced.

In addition to probation, Superior Court Judge E. Talbot Callister ordered the heiresss to make financial restitution to Huett.

A report filed by Miss Hearst's probation investigator revealed that Huett is "extremely bitter and angry as to how this offense has affected his life and business."

Huett, who was struck in the arm by one of Miss Hearst's bullets, has filed a civil suit against Miss Hearst, the report said, but was unable to get past her bodyguards to serve a subpoena.

He has estimated damage to his store at $6,000.

Disaster centers to open

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Missourians affected by tornadoes and severe thunderstorms last week will be able to apply for temporary housing, seek lowrate loans and request further help today at federal disaster assistance centers in Sedalia and Pleasant Hill.

Three persons were killed by tornadoes that swept through four counties May 4, more than 150 others were injured and millions of dollars worth of property was damaged.

The disaster assistance centers will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily at the Community Center in Sedalia and at Memorial Hall in Pleasant Hill, according to Francis X. Tobin, regional director of the Federal Disaster Administration in Kansas City.

Mobile units will also provide assistance in four other communities: Higginsville, City Hall, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Wednesday; Missouri City, City Hall, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Thursday; Excelsior Springs, City Hall, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Friday, and Kansas City, Ruskin High School, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday.

All students back in school

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Schools were open today for all of the Kansas City school district's 51,000 students for the first time since the Federation of Teachers went out on strike seven weeks ago.

Meanwhile, the battle continues in the Missouri Court of Appeals with the district seeking to overturn a Jackson County Circuit ruling which ordered that the district take no reprisals against the strikers.

Judge Lewis W. Clymer issued his order Friday. The order also directed the teachers to go back to work and they voted to do so Sunday. The district decided to delay the opening of all schools until today.

During the strike, the district had gradually reopened most of its schools with nonstriking teachers.

Inside a Minuteman launch system

By Tom Tiede

DAHLEN, N.D. — (NEA) — When the Air Force established the Minuteman Intercontinental Ballistic Missile system in the early 1960s it did so with security in mind. Both bombs and launching crews were placed underground, defended from intrusion by topside guards and by mechanical protections designed to be impenetrable.

But are they impenetrable? At a time of increasingly bold terrorist activity, are the warhead installations safe from invasion?

The answer to both questions may be no. In a visit to a Minuteman site near this small agriculture community I have learned that under some circumstances installation security is nonexistent.

I am not referring to conventional circumstances. It appears the Air Force is correct when it says the missile locations are safe from any direct terrorist attack. The facilities are surrounded by fencing, as well as small arms protection, and full reinforcements are merely a radio call and helicopter hop away.

What's more, even if attacking terrorists were to get into a compound, they would not be able to breach the underground control chamber. The elevator leading to it can be frozen (remotely) by the launch crew; and, finally, the chamber itself is sealed off by a three-foot thick steel door that is indeed beyond forcible entry.

Yet what if the terrorist assault were unconventional? For example, what if a lone thug were to pose as a student doing research, or a citizen on a readily available Minuteman tour, or even a newspaper reporter? Here is where security may fail.

In my experience it did fail, and had I been a terrorist I could have shaken the free world.

What I did was no more than what thousands of other civilians have done over the last decade: apply for permission to visit one of America's 1,000 Minuteman (III) installations. I applied by phone; others, ranging from Boy Scouts to scientists, have done it mostly by letter. Permission was given to me almost immediately.

All that was required by way of identification was a social security number, and something indicating my newspaper affiliation. Anyone can get a social security number, of course; each of the Hanafi Muslims who terrified Washington last month had them. As for my affiliation, I "proved" it with a faded, 12-year-old I.D. card.

From here on there was no more checking. I was cleared. No one actually had any idea who I was, or for that matter for whom I worked, but I was taken directly to launch control station "Golf-Zero," a site having responsibility for 10 missiles, each of which carry more destructive power than was released in any war in history.

I was given a thorough safety briefing on the upstairs level of Golf-Zero. Then, without a search, and with no further need of identification, I was taken 60 feet into the earth to the launch control chamber, the thick door of which was wide open for welcome.

Capt. Bill Pohlad greeted me, and showed me around. We talked pleasantly of the mission, of the procedures, of safeguards and duty requirements. With him in the control room was Lt. Mark Homric. The lieutenant is 24, a post Vietnam soldier as are many at the Minuteman sites; he conducted a panel exercise for me.

At length I interrupted the routine questioning to raise a more pertinent matter. I had a black bag with me, I said, and I wondered why it had not been searched. Supposedly it contained a camera, but realistically it could have contained a gun or a bomb. If I were a terrorist, I said, I would have now penetrated the site.

My revelation was sobering. The smiles of my hosts faded. A sergeant, who had immediate responsibility for my visit, said he'd been told the bag was a camera case, that it had been cleared as such, so he hadn't thought to check further. Neither the captain nor the lieutenant made excuses; they knew they had been negligent.

In subsequent conversations I was told that even if I had been a terrorist, and taken over the site, I could not have launched a missile. The procedures and codes are far too complex, for one thing. Then too, the crew said that if I forced them to fire their effort would be immediately negated by another launching station.

Still in all, had I been a terrorist I could have scored several other impressive victories. For one thing, I would have seen the codes and thereby invalidated them. For another, I could have thrown an enormously brutal scare into the nation. A madman in a missile site? It's something that only happens in the movies; the public psychology would have been devastated.

Fortunately, I was not a madman. Though I had gone so far in my experiment as to put a sobering note ("I am a terrorist!") in my black bag, I am merely a mild mannered reporter, to coin a phrase. But I'm struck by what I could have been, and could have done, and it's clear that our missile site security is not all that it's supposed to be.

WHILE CAPT. BILL POHLAD (left) and Lt. Mark Homric were explaining the missile control panel system, they were asked why they hadn't searched a reporter's camera bag. They said they assumed it had been cleared and, hence, hadn't bothered to check it. (Photo by Tom Tiede)

For another, I could have thrown an enormously brutal scare into the nation. A madman in a missile site? It's something that only happens in the movies; the public psychology would have been devastated.

Fortunately, I was not a madman. Though I had gone so far in my experiment as to put a sobering note ("I am a terrorist!") in my black bag, I am merely a mild mannered reporter, to coin a phrase. But I'm struck by what I could have been, and could have done, and it's clear that our missile site security is not all that it's supposed to be.

Simmons' good guess gives St. Louis edge

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ted Simmons admitted he played a guessing game but in this case he guessed right.

The switch-hitting catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals golfed a knuckle ball off the vicinity of his right knee Monday night and handed the Cincinnati Reds a 6-5 setback with a 10th-inning homer.

"The thing I try to do with knuckle balls is not swing until I have to," said Simmons, whose blast came at the expense of reliever Dale Murray, 0-1, and handed the Reds their fifth successive loss.

"All you can hope is that you can gauge the speed of it," he added. "You can't tell what it's going to do or where, exactly, it's going to be."

That Simmons was batting beyond the ninth inning may have been a tribute to the Cards, who trailed 5-3 after six innings in the nationally televised game.

Johnny Bench's solo homer, his sixth of the year, triggered a four-run rally in the top of the sixth that shot Cincinnati in front by that margin.

But Tony Scott's run-producing single narrowed the gap to 5-4 in the seventh and Keith Hernandez tied the contest at 5-5 with his fifth homer in the eighth.

St. Louis then blunted a bases-loaded Reds threat when Al Hrabosky struck out the side following two singles around a walk in the ninth.

And before Simmons got his chance Cincinnati was again stymied when Ray Knight was gunned down while attempting to score from first on Ken Griffey's double in the 10th.

"It was a great thing to have happen," opined Simmons, who was wildly cheered for his part in the out at home plate when he came to bat.

"People like to see good baseball," he said. "A game like that you could put into a blueprint and not come out with anything more exciting."

If Simmons was the Cards' man of the hour, Hrabosky, 1-0, was not far behind with his near-Herculean feat in the ninth following singles by Griffey and Dan Driessen and a walk to Joe Morgan.

George Foster fanned on a 1-2 pitch, Bench waved futilely at 2-2 and pinch-hitter Bob Bailey looked at a called third strike after fouling off three pitches.

"In that situation I figured that if I was going to lose the game it wasn't going to be on a walk," said Hrabosky, who answered the challenge by firing only fast balls.

Simmons' homer, his sixth, was only the third in four years permitted by the 6-foot-4 Murray, who once toiled 247 1-3 consecutive innings without yielding such a clout.

"My hard sinker has been up, so I've been using other things," Murray explained. "I told Bench that with Simmons coming up, a left-hander, I was going to throw a lot of knucklers."

Simpson beats Royals

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Wayne Simpson's been on the comeback trail so long he's beginning to get saddle sores.

After making a rookie splash in 1970 with a glittering 14-3 record at Cincinnati, the strapping righthanded hurler lost everything on one pitch.

"I threw a fastball..." he recalls of that July night seven years ago, "...and the whole shoulder seemed to give way." He retired to the dugout hoping his shoulder was just overworked, but it turned out to be a muscle tear with internal bleeding.

And the following years have not been kind. He bounced briefly back to the majors with Cincinnati and Kansas City, then drifted to Charleston, Toledo, Omaha, Salt Lake City and — Monday night — Kansas City again, where he pitched the California Angels to a 5-3 victory over the Royals.

"I think I'm starting to come around," he said after giving up just five hits in the six innings he worked.

The victory leveled his record at 2-2 and reinforced the new outlook he's taking on life and baseball.

"Always before, it was always, 'Am I going to make it this year, am I going to stay?'" he said. "I'm past that now. Now I want to just to out and do my job and not think about the problems I've had in the past. All that is behind me."

Does he think the other teams that gave him a look, including the Royals in 1973, gave up on him too soon?

"Well, that thought did run through my mind a few times," Simpson said with a smile. "But I'm not bitter. Let's face it, I'd get off to a bad start, and you can't expect somebody to stay with a pitcher who's struggling like I was."

"Does he feel like he's back in the big leagues to stay?

"Let's just say I hope so," he answered. "Except for the first inning, I was able to get the ball just about wheree I wanted to on every pitch. Anyway, I'm through looking at it that way. This wasn't just a night Wayne Simpson won a ball game. This was a night the California Angels won, and that's the way I'm going to look at it."

The Angels loaded the bases in the first inning and gave Simpson a 2-0 lead when Frank White misplayed a ground ball. After the Royals came back with a run on Al Cowens' triple, Terry Humphrey slammed his first home run of the year, making it 3-1.

Jerry Remy singled home Gil Flores with another Angel tally in the fourth, and in the eighth Joe Rudi doubled to drive home another run.

Royals starter Jim Colborn, 4-3, was the loser.

Lane's hitting helps Purkeys win big, 9-3

Purkey's scored three runs in the first, second and sixth innings while beating Eby's in a battle of the unbeatens 9-3.

Dale Lane ripped two triples and a single to drive in five runs for the winners and Bob Stinnett pitched a four-hitter as Purkey's took over first place in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League with a 3-0 mark.

Henry Leible took the loss.

A three-run, inside-the-park homerun in the sixth inning by infielder Kenny Stokes powered the Eagles Club to a 6-4 victory over Bank of Sikeston in the second game. Stokes hit highlighted a four-run rally in that frame that helped the winners erase a 3-2 Bank of Sikeston lead. John Chessor picked up the win, defeating David Mulcahy.

Hungarian won't play

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Al Hrabosky says he'll appeal part of a $150 fine assessed for his part in a free-for-all occurring during a National League game here last Friday.

"I will not pay $100 for fighting. That's it," the Cards' star reliever maintained Monday after being notified of the penalty.

"I'll make out the check for the automatic $50 fine," said Hrabosky, referring to a penalty that stemmed from his hitting the Houston Astros' Cesar Cedeno with a pitch.

"But what am I supposed to do if somebody charges at me, just sit and take it?" he asked. "That's not the first time I hit a guy."

Cedeno, after being struck by the pitch, charged the mound, thereby precipitating a series of brawls involving players and coaches from both benches.

The Cards' Roger Freed, who was ejected from the game, received a $300 league office fine.

Juniors' tourney to be held

The Fifth Annual Sikeston Country Club Juniors Open Tennis Tournament, sponsored by First National Bank of Sikeston, will be held on Saturday and Sunday, June 4th and 5th, 1977, at the Sikeston Country Club.

Boys and girls competition in both singles and doubles will be in the following age brackets: 17 and 18, 15 and 16, 13 and 14 and under 12.

All matches will be played best two of three sets.

Entry fee is $3.00 for singles and $3.00 per team for doubles. All players should bring a can of new tennis balls. Entry blanks may be obtained from local high school tennis coaches. Send entry and fee to Fielding Potashnick, P. O. Box 459, Sikeston, Missouri 63801.

All players should report to the Sikeston Country Club at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, June 4th.

9-run first gives Devils 11-4 win

SCOTT CITY — The Chaffee Red Devils exploded for nine runs in the first and waltzed to an 11-4 decision over Notre Dame in the semi-finals of the District 11 Tournament.

Scott Wachter picked up the win for Chaffee, his seventh in nine decisions. He allowed the Bulldogs just four hits.

Catcher Tony Dalton had three hits, including a triple. Les Eichorn had two hits. Both players drove in three.

The nine runs in the first put the game away and two more in the second were just frosting on the cake. Notre Dame scored single runs in the first, third, sixth and bottom of the seventh, but it wasn't enough to keep starter Rick Dohogne from being the loser.

Lindy Duncan belted a homerun during the first inning rally.

Former Sikestonian honored

Craig Schwab, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Schwab of Blytheville, qualified for the Arkansas Meet of Champions next Saturday by turning in a time of 1:57.9 in the half-mile at Arkadelphia last weekend. The three best times in each event and in all four classes of school size qualify.

Schwab, a senior, is formerly from Sikeston.

Simmons' good guess gives St. Louis edge

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ted Simmons admitted he played a guessing game but in this case he guessed right.

The switch-hitting catcher for the St. Louis Cardinals golfed a knuckle ball off the vicinity of his right knee Monday night and handed the Cincinnati Reds a 6-5 setback with a 10th-inning homer.

"The thing I try to do with knuckle balls is not swing until I have to," said Simmons, whose blast came at the expense of reliever Dale Murray, 0-1, and handed the Reds their fifth successive loss.

"All you can hope is that you can gauge the speed of it," he added. "You can't tell what it's going to do or where, exactly, it's going to be."

That Simmons was batting beyond the ninth inning may have been a tribute to the Cards, who trailed 5-3 after six innings in the nationally televised game.

Johnny Bench's solo homer, his sixth of the year, triggered a four-run rally in the top of the sixth that shot Cincinnati in front by that margin.

But Tony Scott's run-producing single narrowed the gap to 5-4 in the seventh and Keith Hernandez tied the contest at 5-5 with his fifth homer in the eighth.

St. Louis then blunted a bases-loaded Reds threat when Al Hrabosky struck out the side following two singles around a walk in the ninth.

And before Simmons got his chance Cincinnati was again stymied when Ray Knight was gunned down while attempting to score from first on Ken Griffey's double in the 10th.

"It was a great thing to have happen," opined Simmons, who was wildly cheered for his part in the out at home plate when he came to bat.

"People like to see good baseball," he said. "A game like that you could put into a blueprint and not come out with anything more exciting."

If Simmons was the Cards' man of the hour, Hrabosky, 1-0, was not far behind with his near-Herculean feat in the ninth following singles by Griffey and Dan Driessen and a walk to Joe Morgan.

George Foster fanned on a 1-2 pitch, Bench waved futilely at 2-2 and pinch-hitter Bob Bailey looked at a called third strike after fouling off three pitches.

"In that situation I figured that if I was going to lose the game it wasn't going to be on a walk," said Hrabosky, who answered the challenge by firing only fast balls.

Simmons' homer, his sixth, was only the third in four years permitted by the 6-foot-4 Murray, who once toiled 247 1-3 consecutive innings without yielding such a clout.

"My hard sinker has been up, so I've been using other things," Murray explained. "I told Bench that with Simmons coming up, a left-hander, I was going to throw a lot of knucklers."

Simpson beats Royals

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Wayne Simpson's been on the comeback trail so long he's beginning to get saddle sores.

After making a rookie splash in 1970 with a glittering 14-3 record at Cincinnati, the strapping righthanded hurler lost everything on one pitch.

"I threw a fastball..." he recalls of that July night seven years ago, "...and the whole shoulder seemed to give way." He retired to the dugout hoping his shoulder was just overworked, but it turned out to be a muscle tear with internal bleeding.

And the following years have not been kind. He bounced briefly back to the majors with Cincinnati and Kansas City, then drifted to Charleston, Toledo, Omaha, Salt Lake City and — Monday night — Kansas City again, where he pitched the California Angels to a 5-3 victory over the Royals.

"I think I'm starting to come around," he said after giving up just five hits in the six innings he worked.

The victory leveled his record at 2-2 and reinforced the new outlook he's taking on life and baseball.

"Always before, it was always, 'Am I going to make it this year, am I going to stay?'" he said. "I'm past that now. Now I want to just to out and do my job and not think about the problems I've had in the past. All that is behind me."

Does he think the other teams that gave him a look, including the Royals in 1973, gave up on him too soon?

"Well, that thought did run through my mind a few times," Simpson said with a smile. "But I'm not bitter. Let's face it, I'd get off to a bad start, and you can't expect somebody to stay with a pitcher who's struggling like I was."

"Does he feel like he's back in the big leagues to stay?

"Let's just say I hope so," he answered. "Except for the first inning, I was able to get the ball just about wherever I wanted to on every pitch. Anyway, I'm through looking at it that way. This wasn't just a night Wayne Simpson won a ball game. This was a night the California Angels won, and that's the way I'm going to look at it."

The Angels loaded the bases in the first inning and gave Simpson a 2-0 lead when Frank White misplayed a ground ball. After the Royals came back with a run on Al Cowens' triple, Terry Humphrey slammed his first home run of the year, making it 3-1.

Jerry Remy singled home Gil Flores with another Angel tally in the fourth, and in the eighth Joe Rudi doubled to drive home another run.

Royals starter Jim Colborn, 4-3, was the loser.

Lane's hitting helps Purkeys win big, 9-3

Purkey's scored three runs in the first, second and sixth innings while beating Eby's in a battle of the unbeatens 9-3.

Dale Lane ripped two triples and a single to drive in five runs for the winners and Bob Stinnett pitched a four-hitter as Purkey's took over first place in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League with a 3-0 mark.

Henry Leible took the loss.

A three-run, inside-the-park homerun in the sixth inning by infielder Kenny Stokes powered the Eagles Club to a 6-4 victory over Bank of Sikeston in the second game. Stokes hit highlighted a four-run rally in that frame that helped the winners erase a 3-2 Bank of Sikeston lead. John Chessor picked up the win, defeating David Mulcahy.

Hungarian won't play

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Al Hrabosky says he'll appeal part of a $150 fine assessed for his part in a free-for-all occurring during a National League game here last Friday.

"I will not pay $100 for fighting. That's it," the Cards' star reliever maintained Monday after being notified of the penalty.

"I'll make out the check for the automatic $50 fine," said Hrabosky, referring to a penalty that stemmed from his hitting the Houston Astros' Cesar Cedeno with a pitch.

"But what am I supposed to do if somebody charges at me, just sit and take it?" he asked. "That's not the first time I hit a guy."

Cedeno, after being struck by the pitch, charged the mound, thereby precipitating a series of brawls involving players and coaches from both benches.

The Cards' Roger Freed, who was ejected from the game, received a $300 league office fine.

9-run first gives Devils 11-4 win

SCOTT CITY — The Chaffee Red Devils exploded for nine runs in the first and waltzed to an 11-4 decision over Notre Dame in the semi-finals of the District 11 Tournament.

Scott Wachter picked up the win for Chaffee, his seventh in nine decisions. He allowed the Bulldogs just four hits.

Catcher Tony Dalton had three hits, including a triple. Les Eichorn had two hits. Both players drove in three.

The nine runs in the first put the game away and two more in the second were just frosting on the cake. Notre Dame scored single runs in the first, third, sixth and bottom of the seventh, but it wasn't enough to keep starter Rick Dohogne from being the loser.

Lindy Duncan belted a homerun during the first inning rally.

Dear Ann Landers

Alcoholism, the only disease bottled, sold

Dear Ann Landers: I predict a stronger response (even bigger than the meatloaf recipe fiasco) to your statement, "Everyone should bathe or shower once a day – morning or night."

You failed to add a qualifying statement explaining that U.S. cultural habits call for such. But prepare to hear from thousands of second-generation Americans who will tell you that daily bathing destroys essential body oils and makes a person susceptible to colds. Get ready to learn that Laplanders do not find it necessary to bathe daily, nor do certain Australians, nor Japanese pearl divers.

You are about to discover that the world doesn't have the water supply to follow your advice. Clean out a drawer for the messages from European visitors telling you that North Americans are "soap-and-water-crazy" and "clean fiends." You just might pull the post office out of the red with this single number, honey. -- Cheers From Grand Rapids LaVerne

Dear La Verne: Would you believe -- only a couple dozen letters from readers pointing out that poeple with skin problems ought not bathe or shower every day! (They are right.)

The fascinating part of writing this column is the unpredictability of my readers. Bless 'em.

Dear Ann Landers: So often I have heard alcoholism referred to as a disease. I never quite believed it. Recently, I ran across a piece in a magazine and now I am less sure than ever. It said:

If alcoholism is a disease, it is the only disease that is bottled and sold.

And it is the only disease that is contracted by the will of man.

It is the only disease that requires a license to propagate it.

If alcoholism is a disease, it is the only disease that produces revenue for the government.

And it is the only disease that provokes crime. What's more –

It is the only disease that is habit-forming.

It is also the only disease that brings violent death on the highways.

It is the only disease that is spread by advertising.

And it is the only disease without a germ or virus cause . . .

It just might be that it's not a disease at all. -- A Doubting Thomas

Dear Tom: I believe alcoholism IS a disease, but it is emotional, not physical.

This shoots large holes in the piece -- for example, "Alcoholism is the only disease that is bottled and sold." The "disease" is neither bottled nor sold. The cause of it is. And on and on. But thanks for writing.

Dear Ann: My brothers and I think our father is having an affair. (I am 13, and the oldest.) In fact, we know he is because he says he is spending evenings with a man friend and we have heard from kids at school that his car is parked in front of a certain woman's house almost every night.

My mother is in and out of the hospital because of a liver problem. We think she suspects something. Mom is the sweetest person in the world. We don't want to hurt her, but we think she should be told. Yes or no? -- Worried

Dear Worried: Your mother probably knows and is handling the problem in her own way. My advice is give her lots of love -- and keep quiet.

Jean Tolbert tells her story how Weight Watchers helped her

Jean Tolbert, 107 6th St., the pastor of Trinity Church in Sikeston, is greeted with a 'Good Morning, Slim' each Sunday morning by the Sunday School superintendant. However, she does not consider his greeting disrespectful. She is quick to point out that the greeting makes her feel good.

Some name tags, however, she did find distasteful. She recalled two such names 'Jumbo and Pumi. She explained, "My sister in Illinois referred to me in that way after seeing these two elephants on TV." That was when the pastor had a weight problem.

But now Jean wears a size 12 not a size 22½ dress. She has lost 100 pounds as a member of Weight Watchers and was recently honored at a Century Club luncheon held at the Breckenridge Inn in St. Louis County. Her dad, also a minister took over Jean's pulpit so she could be in St. Louis for the occasion.

Jean was not a big baby. "I only weighed 3½ pounds," she says. Nor was she a fat teenager. She did not become fat until she became an adult. This Century Club member stressed, "I didn't want to be fat. I felt ashamed for people to see me. My biggest problem as a fat person was finding pretty clothes to fit me. My sisters and I sing together and we used to travel a lot and we always dressed alike. I was the one that had to wear something different because of my large size."

"I'll diet tomorrow"

People would ask her if she was the mother of her sisters. That was embarrassing but not as embarrassing as one incident that she recalled, "One night I was directing the choir at the church when I noticed a certain young man with a smile and a very red face which seemed to set off a contagious reaction in the choir. I turned around to my sister at the piano to ask her what was wrong and then I realized that my dress was unbuttoned from the naval down. It was a very embarrasing situation for me but I finally laughed with the rest of them. I was just simply too big in size to keep my dress buttoned."

Jean, like many other people always promised herself that she would go on a diet tomorrow. She declared, "Tomorrow didn't come for a long time. I just remained miserable. It wasn't until the day that I reached a very depressed and desperate state that I realized I didn't have to be fat. I realized things could be different. I realized that I was the cause of my being fat. I had in this state reached a point where I was totally ashamed to appear before my congregation. I prayed to God and midst my tears I felt as if he was telling me to go back to a Weight Watchers class."

Jean rejoins a class for the third time

It was then Jean rejoined for the third time a Weight Watchers class. She says now, "I am proud to be a part of the Weight Watchers family. I am so glad my great lecturer Mary Martin and the Weight Watchers organization were there to help me when I was desperate and really needed the Program. I feel so proud and I am so much happier when I get up in the morning and put my new this body in my size 12 pants and size 36 blouse. I now have a much more extensive wardrobe and am not confined to the pick of three dresses and I am now the smallest of my four sisters. I have more self-confidence and a smile for everybody. However, I have to admit that I quite often take a look in the mirror to see if its really me."

Honored recently

Jean Tolbert, pastor of the Trinity Church in Sikeston, stands in front of her "before photo" at the Weight Watchers Century Club luncheon in St. Louis County, Missouri. She was one of 53 people honored for having lost 100 pounds as a member of Weight Watchers. Sandie Folender, Area Director for Weight Watchers in Greater Missouri and Illinois, holds the microphone for Pastor Tolbert.

Dear Ann Landers

Alcoholism, the only disease bottled, sold

Dear Ann Landers: I predict a stronger response (even bigger than the meatloaf recipe fiasco) to your statement, "Everyone should bathe or shower once a day – morning or night."

You failed to add a qualifying statement explaining that U.S. cultural habits call for such. But prepare to hear from thousands of second-generation Americans who will tell you that daily bathing destroys essential body oils and makes a person susceptible to colds. Get ready to learn that Laplanders do not find it necessary to bathe daily, nor do certain Australians, nor Japanese pearl divers.

You are about to discover that the world doesn't have the water supply to follow your advice. Clean out a drawer for the messages from European visitors telling you that North Americans are "soap-and-water-crazy" and "clean fiends." You just might pull the post office out of the red with this single number, honey. -- Cheers From Grand Rapids LaVerne

Dear La Verne: Would you believe -- only a couple dozen letters from readers pointing out that poeple with skin problems ought not bathe or shower every day! (They are right.)

The fascinating part of writing this column is the unpredictability of my readers. Bless 'em.

Dear Ann Landers: So often I have heard alcoholism referred to as a disease. I never quite believed it. Recently, I ran across a piece in a magazine and now I am less sure than ever. It said:

If alcoholism is a disease, it is the only disease that is bottled and sold.

And it is the only disease that is contracted by the will of man.

It is the only disease that requires a license to propagate it.

If alcoholism is a disease, it is the only disease that produces revenue for the government.

And it is the only disease that provokes crime. What's more –

It is the only disease that is habit-forming.

It is also the only disease that brings violent death on the highways.

It is the only disease that is spread by advertising.

And it is the only disease without a germ or virus cause . . .

It just might be that it's not a disease at all. -- A Doubting Thomas

Dear Tom: I believe alcoholism IS a disease, but it is emotional, not physical.

This shoots large holes in the piece -- for example, "Alcoholism is the only disease that is bottled and sold." The "disease" is neither bottled nor sold. The cause of it is. And on and on. But thanks for writing.

Dear Ann: My brothers and I think our father is having an affair. (I am 13, and the oldest.) In fact, we know he is because he says he is spending evenings with a man friend and we have heard from kids at school that his car is parked in front of a certain woman's house almost every night.

My mother is in and out of the hospital because of a liver problem. We think she suspects something. Mom is the sweetest person in the world. We don't want to hurt her, but we think she should be told. Yes or no? – Worried

Dear Worried: Your mother probably knows and is handling the problem in her own way. My advice is give her lots of love -- and keep quiet.

Jean Tolbert tells her story how Weight Watchers helped her

Jean Tolbert, 107 6th St., the pastor of Trinity Church in Sikeston, is greeted with a 'Good Morning, Slim' each Sunday morning by the Sunday School superintendant. However, she does not consider his greeting disrespectful. She is quick to point out that the greeting makes her feel good.

Honored recently

Jean Tolbert, pastor of the Trinity Church in Sikeston, stands in front of her "before photo" at the Weight Watchers Century Club luncheon in St. Louis County, Missouri. She was one of 53 people honored for having lost 100 pounds as a member of Weight Watchers. Sandie Folender, Area Director for Weight Watchers in Greater Missouri and Illinois, holds the microphone for Pastor Tolbert.

Some name tags, however, she did find distasteful. She recalled two such names 'Jumbo and Pumi. She explained, "My sister in Illinois referred to me in that way after seeing these two elephants on TV." That was when the pastor had a weight problem.

But now Jean wears a size 12 not a size 22½dress. She has lost 100 pounds as a member of Weight Watchers and was recently honored at a Century Club luncheon held at the Breckenridge Inn in St. Louis County. Her dad, also a minister took over Jean's pulpit so she could be in St. Louis for the occasion.

Jean was not a big baby. "I only weighed 3½ pounds," she says. Nor was she a fat teenager. She did not become fat until she became an adult. This Century Club member stressed, "I didn't want to be fat. I felt ashamed for people to see me. My biggest problem as a fat person was finding pretty clothes to fit me. My sisters and I sing together and we used to travel a lot and we always dressed alike. I was the one that had to wear something different because of my large size."

"I'll diet tomorrow"

People would ask her if she was the mother of her sisters. That was embarrassing but not as embarrassing as one incident that she recalled, "One night I was directing the choir at the church when I noticed a certain young man with a smile and a very red face which seemed to set off a contagious reaction in the choir. I turned around to my sister at the piano to ask her what was wrong and then I realized that my dress was unbuttoned from the naval down. It was a very embarrasing situation for me but I finally laughed with the rest of them. I was just simply too big in size to keep my dress buttoned."

Jean, like many other people always promised herself that she would go on a diet tomorrow. She declared, "Tomorrow didn't come for a long time. I just remained miserable. It wasn't until the day that I reached a very depressed and desperate state that I realized I didn't have to be fat. I realized things could be different. I realized that I was the cause of my being fat. I had in this state reached a point where I was totally ashamed to appear before my congregation. I prayed to God and midst my tears I felt as if he was telling me to go back to a Weight Watchers class."

Jean rejoins a class for the third time

It was then Jean rejoined for the third time a Weight Watchers class. She says now, "I am proud to be a part of the Weight Watchers family. Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, May 10, the 130th day of 1977. There are 235 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1871, the Treaty of Frankfurt ended the Franco-Prussian War, and Alsace-Lorraine was ceded to Germany.

On this date:

In 1497, the Italian navigator, Amerigo Vespucci, sailed on his first voyage to the New World.

In 1775, the Second Continental Congress met in Philadelphia.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Union forces captured Confederate President Jefferson Davis at Irwinville, Ga.

In 1869, a gold spike was driven at Ogden, Utah, marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad.

In 1940, during World War II, German forces invaded Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg.

In 1941, the Nazi leader, Rudolf Hess, landed by parachute in Scotland in a private effort to make peace in World War II.

Ten years ago: The United States announced a minor collision between an American destroyer and a Soviet destroyer in the Sea of Japan.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon's latest peace offer in the Vietnamese War was rejected by the Communists.

One year ago: Israel announced plans to establish numerous additional settlements in occupied Arab territory.

Today's birthdays: Fred Astaire is 78 years old. Comedienne Nancy Walker is 55.

Thought for today: "Humility is the solid foundation of all the virtues." — Confucius, Chinese philosopher, 551-479 B.C.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Union forces captured Confederate President Jefferson Davis at Irwinville, Ga.

In 1869, a gold spike was driven at Ogden, Utah, marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad.

In 1940, during World War II, German forces invaded Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg.

In 1941, the Nazi leader, Rudolf Hess, landed by parachute in Scotland in a private effort to make peace in World War II.

Academic Achievement Bowl winners

Members of the New Madrid High School team that took first place in the second annual Academic Achievement Bowl, were, from left, Marsha Perry, junior; Scott Harris, sophomore; Cindy Carrell, senior; Linda White, freshman; Phyllis Batz, junior; and David Britt, sophomore. The team competing against teams from Matthews, Lilbourn, Portageville, Parma, Risco and North Pemiscot High Schools, answered questions of general knowledge in all subjects. North Pemiscot High School won second place. Jim Barr of Lilbourn and Ken Lucy of New Madrid were moderators for the event held April 30 at Lilbourn High Shcool.

New Madrid R-1 holds departmental meeting

NEW MADRID — New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged School District's 1976-77 Primary Departmental Meeting was held May 2 at the New Madrid Unit High School.

Glenn Dyke, New Madrid Unit Administrator, and Jean Harrington, New Madrid Unit elementary principal, served as the host administrators for this year's meeting.

The evening consisted of a 'pot luck' dinner for teachers bringing their special dishes. The host school supplied the meat and beverages for the occasion.

Following the meal the group was entertained by the Parma Unit Elementary Choir, directed by Karen Carmen. The choir selected songs of their past performances and presented four selections.

Following the choir's performance Roy Hon, New Madrid County R-1 director of elementary education, briefly addressed the group. The primary teachers then divided up into group meetings and discussed curriculum changes and other ways of improving the primary program.

Purpose of the primary departmental meeting is to afford teachers in the New Madrid County R-1 system the opportunity to discuss collective problems on the primary level and to propose solutions to such problems. Discussion of such problem areas and the proposed solutions evolving out of the annual primary departmental meetings provide a basis for planning for the next school year. Officials said they believe this year's meeting will be extremely beneficial in planning for the 1977-78 school year.

One of the reasons the primary departmental meetings are so productive is due to the willingness of teachers to serve in chairing a grade or area level as well as their participation in the meeting Dyke said. Teachers who served as chairmen for their grade or area level this year are:

Mrs. Susan Street, Lilbourn Unit first grade teacher; Mrs. Fern White, New Madrid Unit second grade teacher; Mrs. Flo Ellen Cude, Matthews Unit third grade teacher; Miss Florence Fisher, Portageville Unit Kindergarten teacher; Mrs. Estella Graham, Parma Unit Primary special education teacher; Miss Jeanette Haubold, Lilbourn Unit learning disabilities teacher; Mrs. Elizabeth Cross, Portageville Unit music teacher; Mrs. Kathleen Johnson, Lilbourn Unit art teacher; Mrs. Mary Kay Davis, Lilbourn and Parma Unit speech therapist; and Mrs. Betty Morse, Parma Unit nurse.

Those serving on the decoration committee include Mrs. Donna Snider, Mrs. Fern White, Miss Linda Spiegel, Mrs. Lillian Hedgepeth, Mrs. Ella LaValle, and Mrs. Charlotte Hogan, all of the New Madrid Unit.

Nuclear plant progressing on schedule

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state's first nuclear-powered generating plant is on schedule and $20 million under budget through this March, according to a report of the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Although Union Electric Co. announced in February that it would have to slow down the work schedule on the $2.5 billion project because financing was becoming a problem, the PSC report said construction of the plant in Callaway County is progressing within the original work schedule.

The construction review, ordered by the commission in 1975 after the utility won approval to build the facility, was performed by the PSC's management services division. Another review will be conducted within the next year.

The first generating unit of the plant was originally scheduled to be in operation by 1981, but the company has delayed the completion date until 1982. The second unit, originally scheduled to begin operating in 1983, will now begin producing power in 1987.

According to the report, the plant is 4 per cent completed with $103 million spent through March. The company had planned to spend $123 million through March.

Union Electric officials say they expect to spend about $190 million more during the next year and the plant should be 20 per cent completed by April 1978.

Keeping in touch . . . by Senator Jack Danforth

In the aftermath of the past few national elections, some scholars and journalists have claimed that Americans are developing an increased interest in public policy. The theory is that people care more about issues now than they did in the 1950's or early 1960's. The volume of mail I have received in my short tenure as your Senator convinces me that this is true. I am very pleased that so many people are writing.

I am now receiving a weekly volume of between 3,000 and 4,000 pieces of mail from constituents, about a variety of issues. One week I received over 7,000 letters. These letters have been an excellent link to the opinions and the problems of people back home.

The largest volume of mail deals with such issues as energy, defense and tax reform. I am also receiving considerable mail about such diverse issues as airline deregulation, the Meramec Dam, common situs picketing and the FDA ban on saccharin. A letter characterizing the feeling in Missouri about the saccharin ban called it "unreasonable, illogical and downright ludicrous."

I have said on many occasions that people in the federal government are isolating themselves from the public. They have a tendency to believe that because they are at the seat of government, they have a monopoly on wisdom. Their decision making has become heavy-handed, paternalistic and separated from public opinion. From the letters we are receiving, it is clear to me that people are interested in and concerned about what goes on here. They do not want the government to run their lives for them. As a woman from St. Louis wrote me, "Big Brother is not always right." People in government should listen more often to what people out of government are saying.

A Gasconade County farmer has written that the federal regulations governing farm safety make no sense at all. He is convinced that these regulations were written by persons who have never spent any time on a farm. That probably is true, and it happens all too often in government. The result is that simple issues are complicated to the point that no one can understand the problems any longer, let alone the solutions.

Let me cite an example involving a Kansas City meatpacker. The Food and Drug Administration came to inspect his meat-packing facility. The FDA decided he must cover his concrete floors with an impermeable, slick coating to insure sanitation. He followed this directive, at considerable expense. Shortly thereafter, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration inspected his plant and advised him that the slick coating on his floors was a safety hazard and would have to be removed. I think we all should be outraged by such results.

Constituents, for the most part, explain problems in simple, human terms. Government can and should learn from their communications. I want to thank those of you who have written. It is essential for me to know what is on your mind. I hope each of you will always feel free to write.

AGING CONFERENCE PLANNED

President Carter has proclaimed May, 1977, Older American Month. Coinciding with this action, I have joined with twelve Senators in introducing legislation authorizing the President to call a White House Conference on Aging in 1981.

In 1950, President Harry S. Truman directed the Federal Security Agency to hold a National Conference on Aging. This was the first federal effort to assess the problems emerging as a result of the great increase in the number of elderly in the population, and to develop a national policy for aging.

Since that time, two additional White House Conferences on Aging have been held, and the legislative outgrowth of these conferences can now be seen in medicare, medicaid, increased social security benefits, increased financial support for health care, housing, transportation, employment training, and volunteer programs for the elderly.

Despite these many advances, much remains to be done. The elderly population continues to increase, with some estimates that there will be more than 35 million persons aged 65 or older by the end of this century. Congress has addressed many problems of the elderly through the Older Americans Act; however, new and unforeseen needs resulting from spiraling inflation, fuel shortages, increasing utility costs, and last year's exceptionally severe winter now demand our attention.

Grass Roots Involvement

The White House Conference on Aging is not a Washington meeting of older persons and government officials resulting in a voluminous report that gathers dust on government shelves thereafter. Rather, the conference begins with community meetings in the home towns of our millions of older Americans, meetings where personal needs and problems are aired. These grassroots forums then are reviewed by task forces at the state conferences, which in turn formulate concrete policy proposals to be presented at the national White House Conference. Delegates to Washington represent the local community meetings, the state conferences and such diverse groups as health and welfare officials, social workers, young people, and retirees -- all of whom have a strong commitment to the development of policies that will benefit the elderly.

With a national policy on aging based on the criteria developed by the Congress, we will have a clear mandate for action to meet the already well-documented needs and the many unanticipated shortcomings in our program to serve these most deserving Americans.

This is not to say that Congress will sit idly by until the Conference has been completed. The Senate Subcommittee on Aging, of which I am Chairman, will be conducting hearings over the next eight months to assess what amendments must be made next year to improve and expand programs under the Older Americans Act. I urge all Senior Citizens to share with me their ideas as to how existing service programs can better meet their needs, and as to what immediate steps must be taken.

Sikeston Air Show set for Aug. 13

The Sikeston Pilots' Association will hold its annual air show Aug 13, the Saturday of Rodeo Week.

Merl Gustofferson, who has thrilled local crowds in years past with his low-altitude aerobatics in old warbirds, has agreed to participate. He plans to bring three World War II airplanes, an AT-6, a Corsair, and a P-51 Mustang.

Chairman of the air show this year will be Dan Rosenstein. Loren Wooten is in charge of advertising. Leonard Siggers and Dennis McGarrity are coordinating the exhibition of agricultural airplanes.

The auxilliary police, the Civil Air Patrol, and the local parachute club will help again this year. Airplane rides will be provided by members of the Sikeston Pilots' Association. Proceeds from the show will be used for improving the Sikeston Memorial Airport, owned by the City of Sikeston.

Bill Swann, chairman of the Airport Board, reported at the April meeting that Sikeston is high on the Federal Aviation Administration's list to receive 90 per cent funding for an extension of the runway, which will enable business jets to use the airport. The Airport Board recommended that Sikeston's 10 percent share of the cost of this project be included in the budget being prepared by the City Council. If local funding is not provided for the initial 10 per cent of this $300,000 project, it will not be funded by the federal government, Swann said. The money will then go to some other locality.

J. G. "Pete" Malone, newly appointed director of aviation for the State of Missouri, gave a brief explanation of the duties of his new office.

Windmill customers to get special electric rate

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Public Service Commission has approved a plan allowing Consolidated Edison Co. — the nation's largest utility — to establish a special experimental rate for windmill customers.

The rate plan was filed by Con Ed after owners of a 2-kilowatt windmill on a rooftop in Manhattan — the only windmill in operation in the city — sought to feed back into the utility's system any excess electricity they generated.

Con Edison, citing possible dangers to its equipment from electrical surges, turned back the offer from the owners of the $4,000, three-bladed windmill and asked the PSC for a ruling.

The PSC on Thursday ordered Con Ed to buy back the electricty. The state agency also approved a wind-power rate plan proposed by the utility that would allow Con Ed to connect up to 25 windmills within the New York City area to its power system. Each windmill will be permitted to have a generating capacity of up to 10 kilowatts — enough power to operate 100 100-watt lightbulbs.

Under the wind-power rate, customers would pay the standard minimum charge for small commercial customers of $4.96 per month, and $1 monthly charge for an extra meter to measure the flow of electricity back into the system. The customer also would pay the company a surcharge of $6.80 for each kilowatt of windmill capacity.

The surcharge, Con Ed said, will enable it to monitor its power system to see what impact or interference the flow of excess electricity might have on other customers in the area.

And the minimum rate is being charged, because, as a Con Ed spokesman said, the utility has to "be ready at any time" to supply current when the wind is not blowing.

Any excess wind-generated electricity would be purchased by Con Ed at a rate of about 2.5 cents per kilowatt-hour.

How much — if any — money a windmill-run Con Ed customer would save on his monthly bill would depend on the amount of wind-generated electricity he can tap.

And in theory, the plan would let some customers perhaps even get a little money back by selling excess power to Con Ed. But it would take a lot of dependable wind to turn a profit and perhaps save an appreciable amount on the monthly bill.

So that the power generated by a windmill can supplement an entire household's electrical needs, the windmill owners would be allowed to hook up the machines directly to the company's power system.

Existing Con Ed rules forbid customers to attach any kind of generator to its power system.

Electronics may reduce use of mail

• WASHINGTON (AP) — Experts on electronic technology said Thursday that use of the mail will go down substantially by the 1980s because many mail users will turn to electronic communications.

The testimony to a House Post Office subcommittee supports the position of the Postal Service, which is considering trimming services it feels will not be justifed when electronic communications systems become common.

"First class could lose 8 per cent by 1980 and 32 per cent by 1984," two George Washington University researchers said, summarizing their study of electronic communication and its effects on the Postal Service.

The two, Joseph Margolin and Fred B. Wood, told the House Post Office subcommittee that the annual revenue loss to the Postal Service could be as much as $2.2 billion within a decade. The mail agency now operates on a budget of about $15 billion per year.

Electronic systems already are allowing some business offices to communicate with each other cheaper and faster than by sending letters through the mail. As their use becomes more widespread in coming years, costs for remaining mail users are expected to increase.

"If the Postal Service experiences substantial reductions in mail volume and is still required to maintain traditional services, the cost for the remaining volume will be very high because a large part of its costs are relatively fixed," Henry Geller, former general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, told the subcommittee.

The witnesses said the primary loss to the postal service will be in transaction mail. This type of mail, consisting of bills, checks and receipts, now comprises 35 per cent of all mail.

Geller said, "Congress must face the problem of erosion of revenue to the new telecommunications technologies and plan for a scaled-down system. That planning should begin now."

He did not elaborate but a federal study commission last month recommended that mail deliveries be reduced from six to five days per week. The Postal Service has said it is "seriously considering" doing this by eliminating Saturday mail deliveries.

J. G. "Pete" Malone, newly appointed director of aviation for the State of Missouri, gave a brief explanation of the duties of his new office.

Windmill customers to get special electric rate

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Public Service Commission has approved a plan allowing Consolidated Edison Co. — the nation's largest utility — to establish a special experimental rate for windmill customers.

The rate plan was filed by Con Ed after owners of a 2-kilowatt windmill on a rooftop in Manhattan — the only windmill in operation in the city — sought to feed back into the utility's system any excess electricity they generated.

Con Edison, citing possible dangers to its equipment from electrical surges, turned back the offer from the owners of the $4,000, three-bladed windmill and asked the PSC for a ruling.

The PSC on Thursday ordered Con Ed to buy back the electricty. The state agency also approved a wind-power rate plan proposed by the utility that would allow Con Ed to connect up to 25 windmills within the New York City area to its power system. Each windmill will be permitted to have a generating capacity of up to 10 kilowatts — enough power to operate 100 100-watt lightbulbs.

Under the wind-power rate, customers would pay the standard minimum charge for small commercial customers of $4.96 per month, and $1 monthly charge for an extra meter to measure the flow of electricity back into the system. The customer also would pay the company a surcharge of $6.80 for each kilowatt of windmill capacity.

The surcharge, Con Ed said, will enable it to monitor its power system to see what impact or interference the flow of excess electricity might have on other customers in the area.

And the minimum rate is being charged, because, as a Con Ed spokesman said, the utility has to "be ready at any time" to supply current when the wind is not blowing.

Any excess wind-generated electricity would be purchased by Con Ed at a rate of about 2.5 cents per kilowatt-hour.

How much — if any — money a windmill-run Con Ed customer would save on his monthly bill would depend on the amount of wind-generated electricity he can tap.

And in theory, the plan would let some customers perhaps even get a little money back by selling excess power to Con Ed. But it would take a lot of dependable wind to turn a profit and perhaps save an appreciable amount on the monthly bill.

So that the power generated by a windmill can supplement an entire household's electrical needs, the windmill owners would be allowed to hook up the machines directly to the company's power system.

Existing Con Ed rules forbid customers to attach any kind of generator to its power system.

Electronics may reduce use of mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Experts on electronic technology said Thursday that use of the mail will go down substantially by the 1980s because many mail users will turn to electronic communications.

The testimony to a House Post Office subcommittee supports the position of the Postal Service, which is considering trimming services it feels will not be justifed when electronic communications systems become common.

"First class could lose 8 per cent by 1980 and 32 per cent by 1984," two George Washington University researchers said, summarizing their study of electronic communication and its effects on the Postal Service.

The two, Joseph Margolin and Fred B. Wood, told the House Post Office subcommittee that the annual revenue loss to the Postal Service could be as much as $2.2 billion within a decade. The mail agency now operates on a budget of about $15 billion per year.

Electronic systems already are allowing some business offices to communicate with each other cheaper and faster than by sending letters through the mail. As their use becomes more widespread in coming years, costs for remaining mail users are expected to increase.

"If the Postal Service experiences substantial reductions in mail volume and is still required to maintain traditional services, the cost for the remaining volume will be very high because a large part of its costs are relatively fixed," Henry Geller, former general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, told the subcommittee.

The witnesses said the primary loss to the postal service will be in transaction mail. This type of mail, consisting of bills, checks and receipts, now comprises 35 per cent of all mail.

Geller said, "Congress must face the problem of erosion of revenue to the new telecommunications technologies and plan for a scaled-down system. That planning should begin now."

He did not elaborate but a federal study commission last month recommended that mail deliveries be reduced from six to five days per week. The Postal Service has said it is "seriously considering" doing this by eliminating Saturday mail deliveries.

Letter asking support for bill is presented

BENTON— Scott County Assessor Gerald Inman told the County Court Monday he had received a letter from the Missouri Association of Counties (MAC) regarding a Missouri Senate Bill No. 277 which would provide 50 per cent funding of assessors offices.

The letter, Inman said, "stated for the first time in recent history, second, third and fourth class counties have the opportunity to have one-half of the total costs for assessing reimbursed to them by the state."

According to the letter the bill, which was approved by the Senate in April, has now been heard by the Fees, Salaries and Retirement Committee of the House of Representatives, but had been passed over for a committee vote on Monday.

The letter suggested counties contact Representative Don Randall of Buchanan County, chairman of the committee, to express their support for the bill.

The city of St. Louis currently gets one-half of its costs for assessment ($519,839 in 1976) including computers, office space, staff, legal fees, etc.

The most any second class county received was $13,555 and the lowest amount being $1,309, the letter said.

After discussin Presiding Judge Louie Hirschowitz said the court had also received a letter and had already attempted to contact Rep. Randall in support o the bill.

Carter says NATO needs more military muscle

LONDON (AP) — President Carter told the NATO allies today Western Europe needs more military muscle because Communist forces are much stronger than they need to be to defend the Soviet Bloc.

Making his debut as the leader of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Carter told a special summit meeting of the alliance the United States is ready "to make a major effort" to improve NATO's strength, and he urged the other 14 members to join in.

Carter called for a committee of NATO defense ministers to study the military status of all alliance members and report at another summit meeting in Washington next May.

"The threat facing the alliance has grown steadily in recent years," Carter said. "The Soviet Union has achieved essential, strategic nuclear equivalents. Its (European) theater nuclear forces have been strengthened. The Warsaw Pact's conventional forces in Europe emphasize an offensive posture.

"These forces are much stronger than needed for any defense purpose. Since 1965 new ground and air weapons have been introduced in most major categories: self-propelled artillery, mobile tactical missiles, mobile air-defense guns, armored personnel carriers, tactical aircraft and tanks. The Pact's buildup continues undiminished."

The president indicated achievement of such goals as recognition of human rights, mutual troop reductions in Central Europe and nuclear arms agreements depends "on a credible defense and deterrent."

He urged the allies to do more to "improve cooperation in development, production and procurement" of weapons, saying they "should not be weakened militarily by waste and overlapping" nor "by disputes over where to buy defense equipment."

He promised U.S. cooperation in promoting "a genuinely two-way trans-Atlantic trade in defense equipment.

"I have instructed the secretary of defense to seek increased opportunities to buy European defense equipment where this would mean efficient use of allied resources," he said. "I will work with the Congress of the United States to this end."

Several NATO members, including the West Germans, have complained over the years that the United States has been unwilling to purchase their weapons and that its calls for standardization of equipment mean everyone should buy American.

Carter said relations between the West and the Communist bloc "must be guided both by a humane vision and by a sense of history.

"Our humane vision leads us to seek broad cooperation with Communist states for the good of mankind," he continued. "Our sense of history teaches us that we and the Soviet Union will continue to compete...."

The NATO meeting was the last event on Carter's first trip abroad as president, and he was returning to Washington today. He arrived in Britain last Thursday night for an economic summit meeting of the major Western industrial nations and Japan and visited Geneva, Switzerland, Monday for a 3½-hour meeting with President Hafez Assad of Syria.

Dear Editor:

The proposal for universal voter registration is one of the greatest threats to our form of government ever proposed by an American President. It would permit each citizen of voting age, with no other qualifications, to register at the polls on election day and cast a ballot.

Senator James Allen has noted: "What this would do would be, particularly in a big city, to allow those who are interested in having people vote, to clean out every skid row hotel, every street corner, every pool room, every beer joint, every X-rated movie house, every massage parlor, and herd these people to the polls an vote them like sheep."

Certainly such a procedure would further water down the votes of informed citizens who take time to educate themselves regarding issues and candidates and their voting record. The President's proposal would greatly increase the potential for fraud.

Universal voter registration should be vigorously opposed. It would help to write Senators Eagleton and Danforth and Representative Bill Burlison and let them know that you want no part of such a scheme. The address is: United States Senate, Wash. D. C. 20010 or U.S. House of Rep. Wash. D.C. 20015.

NEW MADRID — A citizens band radio, color television set and shotgun were taken in separate burglaries Monday of two rural homes, the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department said today.

The Kathleen Barbre home in the Farrenburg Community was burglarized sometime between 8 a.m. and noon. Taken were a CB base radio, valued at $247, and an 18-inch color television set, valued at $347. A lock on the front door had been removed to enter the house.

One classic type 12-gauge, 36-inch barrel pump shotgun valued at $175 was taken from the John Copeland house near LaForge. The house had been entered through an unlocked kitchen window.

Medalist windows broken

Eighteen windows were broken out of the Medalist Industry Inc. building on Industrial Drive sometime early this morning, according to the Public Safety Department.

Officers said someone apparently threw rocks through 18 windows on the south end of the building between 2 and 7 a.m.

No estimate of the damage was given, officers said.

Senate resurrects bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Insurance companies would be prohibited from arbitrarily canceling homeowner's policies under a bill revived in the Missouri Senate Monday.

The bill had been defeated on a 12-18 vote last Wednesday, but a motion to resurrect the measure was approved on a 26-7 roll call Monday.

Amendments which had been adopted were also taken off the bill, putting it in the form first approved by the Senate Insurance Committee.

Sponsored By Sen. J.B. Banks, D-St. Louis, the bill has been labeled as an "anti-redlining measure." Insurance companies would be prohibited from dropping homeowner policy holders without just cause, under the measure.

An underwriter would be able to cancel a policy only for nonpayment of premium, misprepresentation, conviction of a crime which increases the hazards to the property or physical damage which makes the property more vulnerable.

Proponents of the bill say it is needed to prevent deterioration of urban neighborhoods because banks will not lend money on homes which cannot be insured.

Insurance companies would be prohibited from canceling a policy unless a notice was given to the policy holder stating the terms and reason for the cancelation. Generalized terms such as "personal habits," "living conditions," or "poor morals" would not be sufficient explanation of cancellation under the bill.

After the Senate voted to reconsider the defeat of the measure, Banks set it aside for later consideration. It needs to gain both first-round and final Senate approval before going to the House where a similar anti-redlining measure was defeated earlier in the session.

A complete recodification of the state's election law was given first-round approval in the Senate after a revised form of the post card voter registration was again defeated.

Mauer to head state Democrats

JEFFERSON CITY — The Democratic State Committee has elected William F. Mauer, a long-time grassroots Democratic worker from Kansas City, as its new chairman.

Meeting Saturday, May 7, in Jefferson City, the committee approved Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale's recommendation of Mauer as party chairman.

Mauer, 46, will replace John McIlroy, who has resigned.

"It is my desire that the state committee function as an effective, viable organization to further the interests of all Democratic nominees. This is particularly important in the legislative races," Mauer said. "To accomplish this end, the party must necessarily be open to all Missourians."

Mauer, a practicing attorney, was twice elected eighth ward Democratic committeeman in Kansas City and is a Democratic chairman of the fifth Congressional district.

He has long been active in Democratic politics on both the local and state levels.

Mauer received his law degree from the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Miss Black America of 1976 was Twanna Kilgore of Washington D.C.

Unauthorized frequency use most serious CB violation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citizens Band radio operators using unauthorized frequencies are more likely to find themselves in court than CBers breaking other Federal Communications Commission regulations.

Most CBers caught breaking the FCC's five other "trigger violations," which determine policing priorities, pay fines of up to $500 levied by the FCC itself.

"But these (unauthorized frequency users) are the ones we like to take to the U.S. attorney" for criminal prosecution, says Deputy Chief James C. McKinney of the Field Operations Bureau, the FCC's enforcement arm.

McKinney says the charges usually involve violations of the Federal Communications Act for unlicensed use of the frequency involved. Conviction normally brings $1,000 fines, one-year suspended sentences and often confiscation of radio equipment costing several thousand dollars.

"Operating on unauthorized frequencies poses a particular problem because of the interference not only to CBers but to people in the other (radio) services authorized to use those frequencies," he says.

Business and industry and the U.S. government use the frequencies most frequented by unauthorized CBers — frequencies ranging above 27.405 megahertz, or CB Channel 40, to 28 megahertz where the 10-meter amateur radio (Ham) band begins.

"Using those frequencies not only could interfere with legitimate business users, but could interfere with critical government communications," McKinney says.

Although HFing — illegally using the higher frequencies — is "generally widespread over the country," he continues, "you won't find more than a handful of people doing it in any given community."

But those that do can cause problems far from their home stations because of the lack of other radio traffic to block their signals, and the illegal high-powered equipment most use.

It's a desire to transmit long distances, like Ham radio operators are permitted to do, that usually prompts a CBer to move "upstairs," or to the higher frequencies, McKinney contends.

"I just don't buy the argument that they are interested in getting away from congestion," he says, particularly with the 17 new channels available for CB use since January. "I defy you to find all of the new channels in use anywhere at any time."

Hesselrode free on bail

POPLAR BLUFF — Charles Hesselrode Jr., charged with murder and felonious assault, walked out of Butler County Jail Friday afternoon after meeting bond requirements imposed on him by magistrate Bill Batson.

Hesselrode is charged with second degree murder following Thursday night's fatal shooting of John L. Gilmore, 36, Bloomfield, at the Missouri-Pacific Depot.

Bond was set at $10,000 for the murder charge and $5,000 for the charge of felonious assault. A spokesman at the Butler County Jail said Hesselrode was released at 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Hesselrode was arraigned in Magistrate Court at noon on the felony charges. Hesselrode is a key state's witness in the upcoming trial of two former city policemen who are accused of hiring him to burn a club they operated.

The trial of the two men, Bob Eastwood and Dolph Vanderpool, was set for June 15. The two are charged with arson in the Dec. 13, 1974, fire at the Mardi Gras Lounge. The fire destroyed two downtown buildings at the corner of Cedar and Main streets.

Hesslrode's preliminary hearing on the murder and assault charge, however, is set for June 13.

"Certainly we have to consider Mr. Hesselrode's alleged involvement in the shooting as a consequence for (Eastwood's and Vanderpool's trial)," said Gary Ternado, assistant prosecutor. "At this point, however, it is difficult to measure just what the consequence will be."

Hesselreode turned himself in to city police Thursday night after Gilmore's death. The fatal shooting apparently occurred while Hesselrode and Gilmore were allegedly involved in a fight with Amtrak employe, Harold Swindle, 28, St. Louis.

The felonious assault charge lodged against Hesselrode stems from the alleged attack on Swindle.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kinder of Painton are parents of a daughter born Tuesday at Southeast Missouri Hospital, Cape.

Mrs. Martha Josephine Odom, a former resident of Bertrand, died early Sunday at her home in Bragg City.

Oran--Francis Xavier Halter, 62-year-old farmer of near Oran, died suddenly at his home Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Rose celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary with a family dinner on Mother's Day, at their home on Mill Row.

It's a baby boy for Mr. and Mrs. Bob Nowell born Saturday at the Delta Community Hospital. He has been named Steven Kent. He has one sister, Connie, and two brothers, Terry and Blake.

Babies born at the local hospital on the 12th were: A baby girl for Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bruce of Sikeston; a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Claude Love of Sikeston; and a son for Mr. and Mrs. James Stanberry of Morehouse.

A son was born Friday at Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape to Mr. and Mrs. Jewell Ross of Parma.

What's the law?

The case of the hasty retreat

While Alex, a merchant seaman, made his living on water, he never touched it on land. Consequently, when he met a sexy-looking blonde who invited him to her apartment to booze it up, he accepted the invitation with alacrity.

What he couldn't accept, however, was trying to get past her outraged husband who came home unexpectedly. Standing 6 feet 5 inches, the husband stood in the doorway, blocking it with his hulky frame, as he sized up the situation with mounting fury.

Alex, on the other hand, sized up his chances and jumped out of the nearest window which was approximately 25 feet above the ground.

While Alex wasn't injured by the fall, the sudden stop on the sidewalk caused him to break both of his legs. Consequently, he requested the steamship company that employed him to pay his medical bills.

"When a seaman is injured while on shore leave," he reminded his employer, "the company has to pick up his medical tabs."

"Not when he carelessly and intentionally jumps out of a window," was the answer. "If he's stupid enough to do that, he's got to pay his own bills."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Alex's employer pay the medical bills resulting from Alex's hasty retreat?

This is how the judge ruled: YES. The judge held that considering the circumstances in which Alex found himself, his selecting the window as a means of making his hurried exit could be considered neither careless nor unwise. At least, noted the judge, he was still alive. Had he tried to leave by the front door, which was blocked by the enraged mountainous husband, his injuries might have been much more severe.

2 St. Louis-Jonesboro bus runs to be dropped

JEFFERSON CITY — Great Southern Coaches, Inc. has been authorized by the Public Service Commission to discontinue two runs between St. Louis and Jonesboro, Ark., due to the degree of financial loss on the routes.

The commission said it is reluctant to allow elimination of service, but added that the tremendous loss incurred by Great Southern justifies discontinuance of the two runs.

A number of people had testified in opposition to the company's proposal at a hearing in Marble Hill last February.

The commission said it believed that many of the people who testified would use other Great Southern runs or alternate forms of transportation.

The runs eliminated are 801, which leaves St. Louis at 7:20 a.m. and arrives at Jonesboro at 1:40 p.m., and 808, which leaves Jonesboro at 1:30 p.m. and arrives at St. Louis at 7:45 p.m.

The company lost $29,000 on the two runs in 1976, the commission noted, and had a net loss on Missouri operations of $55,349. Evidence also showed, the commission said, that the number of passengers carried declined from 129,346 in 1970 to 79,763 in 1976.

Alterations in the times of three other runs also were approved by the commission. They are:

Run 803 -- Will leave St. Louis at 11 a.m. and arrive in Jonesboro at 5:20 p.m. It now leaves St. Louis at 12:20 p.m. and arrives in Jonesboro at 6:40 p.m.

Run 802 -- Will leave Jonesboro at 6:55 a.m. and arrive in St. Louis at 1:10 p.m. It now leaves Jonesboro at 6:10 a.m. and arrives in St. Louis at 12:25 p.m.

Run 804 -- Will leave Jonesboro at 4:15 p.m. and arrive in St. Louis at 10:30 p.m. It now leaves Jonesboro at 5:55 p.m. and arrives at 11:55 p.m.

Bill regulating out-state universities in Missouri receives feedback

By STEVE BELL
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Out-of-state universities with programs in Missouri would be regulated by the state Department of Higher Education if a bill introduced in the Missouri legislature wins approval.

The bill has sparked a surprising amount of public interest, especially since its late introduction date gives it no chance of passage this session. The bill's sponsor, Rep. Mark Youngdah, D-St. Joseph, hopes it will pass next year.

Out-of-state colleges operating in the Kansas City area alone include Central Michigan University, Southern Illinois University and Upper Iowa University. Missouri is one of nine states that have no laws regulating out-of-state degree programs.

Youngdahl has received letters from some of the in-state, out-state students, asking him not to close down their programs.

A St. Louis newspaper has chastised Youngdahl editorially for introducing the bill, saying that if persons choose to attend a school that is not reputable, that's their perogative.

But Robert W. Jacob, in charge of academic affairs for the higher education department, says such arguments stem from a misunderstanding of the intent of the legislation.

"I am not saying that the passage of such a statute would mean that any state institution would be forced out of the state," Jacob says. "My point is that those out-of-state institutions which offer degree programs should be subject to the same kind of coordination services that in-state institutions are subject to."

Jacobs says he is sure many of the out-state programs are run very well, but he also suspects some are less than adequate. He also complains they come in "and siphon enrollment" from state schools.

He says there is no way to determine how many out-state institutions are in Missouri because the schools do not have to be registered or approved. But he suspects Missouri has more than most states because it lacks regulation.

The bill would not represent too drastic a change for many of the schools. The department already inspects those institutions receiving veterans' payments.

The Central Michigan University program in Kansas City has been reviewed to ensure that adequate currriculum content, attendance and facilities have been maintained.

CMU's Kansas City director, Susan Schmelzer, says the program is operated on weekends to give people unable to attend regular universities a chance to earn degrees.

Schmelzer says the CMU program was prompted by a request from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which sought additional education for some of its employes.

The University of Missouri had been contacted, but the school did not want to bother with the program. So Central Michigan, which has programs in 26 other cities throughout the country, was called.

Schmelzer says she does not think the CMU program "siphons off" students, because most of the CMU students are unable to attend a regular university anyway.

Schmelzer says she has no problems with Youngdahl's proposed bill "as long as it is applied equitably to both in-state and out-state schools."

SeMo grads told to 'get involved'

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Get involved—in selling yourself, in activities "beyond your vocation and daily occupation," and in learning to communicate better.

This was the message delivered Sunday to Southeast Missouri State University's graduating class by Ben H. Wells, chairman of the board of the Seven-Up Company in St. Louis.

Wells, who noted in his prepared text, that many years ago he was an English teacher, described himself as a "card-carrying free enterprise type" who "use advertising and promotion to woo customers," who insists on making a profit, and who is dedicated to increasing sales every year. He said that selling and teaching have similar principles.

"The old AIDA formula really works," he declared, for both teachers and salesmen. The formula calls for gaining attention, arousing interest, and stimulating desire. This leads to action, he said.

To be successful today, the speaker said, people must apply these principles even if they are not employed in the formal fields of teaching or selling.

"No matter how individual your chosen field of work, it involves people and the relating of your work to their needs," he said. He added, "Your job involves the teaching-selling of the people you work with and for the that your good work is good for them."

Wells also urged the graduates to "outreach."

"This means going beyond your vocation and daily occupation," he said. "It is involvement in community affairs, organizations, service groups, church activities, social, charitable, and civic undertakings, yes, and cultural organizations and activities."

The speaker, who is president of the St. Louis Symphony Society, continued, "Wherever you're located, you'll find plenty of organizations that want people with your capabilities and outgoing attitudes to help them in their projects. Join up! You'll find another outlet for your teacher-selling talents—your outreach will stretch your accomplishments and joy in living."

Wells also encouraged the graduates to improve their ability to use the English language an dsuggested they consult a dictionary daily.

"Both teaching and outreaching depend upon communication," he noted. "The better you speak or write, the better your success in both pursuits."

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Robert Leestamper, Southeast Missouri State president. The 835 undergraduates and 54 graduate students at the commencement were introduced by Dr. William Petrek, vice president for academic services. Degrees were conferred by Harry Lottes of Perryville, vice president of the Board of Regents.

Prior to the 4 p.m. exercise, there was numerous other activities related to the graduation, including a reception for the class sponsored by the Alumni Association.

The president of the association, Robert A. Acord of St. Louis, spoke briefly at the commencement, welcoming the graduates into the organiztion.

By STEVE BELL
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Out-of-state universities with programs in Missouri would be regulated by the state Department of Higher Education if a bill introduced in the Missouri legislature wins approval.

The bill has sparked a surprising amount of public interest, especially since its late introduction date gives it no chance of passage this session. The bill's sponsor, Rep. Mark Youngdah, D-St. Joseph, hopes it will pass next year.

Out-of-state colleges operating in the Kansas City area alone include Central Michigan University, Southern Illinois University and Upper Iowa University. Missouri is one of nine states that have no laws regulating out-of-state degree programs.

Youngdahl has received letters from some of the in-state, out-state students, asking him not to close down their programs.

A St. Louis newspaper has chastised Youngdahl editorially for introducing the bill, saying that if persons choose to attend a school that is not reputable, that's their perogative.

But Robert W. Jacob, in charge of academic affairs for the higher education department, says such arguments stem from a misunderstanding of the intent of the legislation.

"I am not saying that the passage of such a statute would mean that any state institution would be forced out of the state," Jacob says. "My point is that those out-of-state institutions which offer degree programs should be subject to the same kind of coordination services that in-state institutions are subject to."

Jacobs says he is sure many of the out-state programs are run very well, but he also suspects some are less than adequate. He also complains they come in "and siphon enrollment" from state schools.

He says there is no way to determine how many out-state institutions are in Missouri because the schools do not have to be registered or approved. But he suspects Missouri has more than most states because it lacks regulation.

The bill would not represent too drastic a change for many of the schools. The department already inspects those institutions receiving veterans' payments.

The Central Michigan University program in Kansas City has been reviewed to ensure that adequate currriculum content, attendance and facilities have been maintained.

CMU's Kansas City director, Susan Schmelzer, says the program is operated on weekends to give people unable to attend regular universities a chance to earn degrees.

Schmelzer says the CMU program was prompted by a request from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which sought additional education for some of its employes.

The University of Missouri had been contacted, but the school did not want to bother with the program. So Central Michigan, which has programs in 26 other cities throughout the country, was called.

Schmelzer says she does not think the CMU program "siphons off" students, because most of the CMU students are unable to attend a regular university anyway.

Schmelzer says she has no problems with Youngdahl's proposed bill "as long as it is applied equitably to both in-state and out-state schools."

SeMo grads told to 'get involved'

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Get involved—in selling yourself, in activities "beyond your vocation and daily occupation," and in learning to communicate better.

This was the message delivered Sunday to Southeast Missouri State University's graduating class by Ben H. Wells, chairman of the board of the Seven-Up Company in St. Louis.

Wells, who noted in his prepared text, that many years ago he was an English teacher, described himself as a "card-carrying free enterprise type" who "use advertising and promotion to woo customers," who insists on making a profit, and who is dedicated to increasing sales every year. He said that selling and teaching have similar principles.

"The old AIDA formula really works," he declared, for both teachers and salesmen. The formula calls for gaining attention, arousing interest, and stimulating desire. This leads to action, he said.

To be successful today, the speaker said, people must apply these principles even if they are not employed in the formal fields of teaching or selling.

"No matter how individual your chosen field of work, it involves people and the relating of your work to their needs," he said. He added, "Your job involves the teaching-selling of the people you work with and for the that your good work is good for them."

Wells also urged the graduates to "outreach."

"This means going beyond your vocation and daily occupation," he said. "It is involvement in community affairs, organizations, service groups, church activities, social, charitable, and civic undertakings, yes, and cultural organizations and activities."

The speaker, who is president of the St. Louis Symphony Society, continued, "Wherever you're located, you'll find plenty of organizations that want people with your capabilities and outgoing attitudes to help them in their projects. Join up! You'll find another outlet for your teacher-selling talents—your outreach will stretch your accomplishments and joy in living."

Wells also encouraged the graduates to improve their ability to use the English language an dsuggested they consult a dictionary daily.

"Both teaching and outreaching depend upon communication," he noted. "The better you speak or write, the better your success in both pursuits."

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Robert Leestamper, Southeast Missouri State president. The 835 undergraduates and 54 graduate students at the commencement were introduced by Dr. William Petrek, vice president for academic services. Degrees were conferred by Harry Lottes of Perryville, vice president of the Board of Regents.

Prior to the 4 p.m. exercise, there was numerous other activities related to the graduation, including a reception for the class sponsored by the Alumni Association.

The president of the association, Robert A. Acord of St. Louis, spoke briefly at the commencement, welcoming the graduates into the organiztion.
